W. I. BUCHANAN DIES IN A LONDON STREET

Former American Minister to Panama Unconscious When Found in Park Lane.

WAS HEAD OF BUFFALO FAIR

State Department Mourns Loss of the Man Who Settled Our Long-Standing Difficulties with Venezuela.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Oct. 17. — William Insco Buchanan, former American Minister to Panama, was found unconscious on the sidewalk in front of 10 Park Lane at 11:50 o'clock last night and died before reaching a hospital. Apoplexy is the supposed cause of his death. The authorities are satisfied that there is no reason to suspect foul play. There had been no robbery, and there were no marks of violence on the body. The Coroner has decided that an inquest is necessary, and it will probably be held Wednesday. An autopsy will be made to-morrow.

Mr. Buchanan, who had spent most of his time in recent years in Europe, arrived at Claridge's from Berlin Thursday night. He seemed in his usual good health when he left the hotel last night at 8 o'clock to keep a dinner engagement, with whom is not known. Ten minutes before midnight Policeman Mathers found him unconscious lying on the pavement in Park Lane. He summoned an ambulance from St. George's Hospital, but on its arrival Dr. Colledge pronounced the man dead.

The body remained unidentified until noon to-day, when the manager of Claridge's saw an announcement on the news ticker that a man in evening dress with the name W. I. Buchanan on his waistcoat had been found dead. He went to the hospital and his suspicions were confirmed. It is supposed that Mr. Buchanan was walking back to the hotel when he was seized with the fatal attack. There was nothing on his person to identify him.

Mrs. Buchanan, who was here this Summer, returned to America a few weeks ago, and is either in Buffalo or in Detroit. Cables were sent to her to-night breaking the news. The American Embassy has taken charge of the remains. After the inquest they will be embalmed and sent to America.

Mr. Buchanan was connected with the Westinghouse Company, of which he had the London office. It is also said that he was engaged in an important diplomatic mission at the time of his death in connection with the Venezuelan claims. This was borne out when an official of the American Embassy went to Claridge's to-night and sealed Mr. Buchanan's apartment, saying it contained very important papers. Efforts were made to avoid an inquest, but Coroner Troutbeck says it is necessary for the satisfaction of all, including relatives.

Mr. Buchanan was a big, heavy man, and looked the picture of health. He has never been known to consult a doctor here.

WASHINGTON IS SHOCKED.

Assistant Secretary Wilson Loath to Believe Buchanan Is Dead.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.—The unofficial announcement of the death in London of former Minister W. I. Buchanan came as a great shock to the State Department. No report on the incident is expected until to-morrow, though the department was aware of Mr. Buchanan's presence in London. Besides watching the business interests of many large American firms, Mr. Buchanan was arranging there certain matters for the State Department in regard to South American relations, a subject on which he was an expert.

"Only last night," said a high official in the State Department, "I was working late on a long letter to Mr. Buchanan in connection with some business in which he had engaged for the department. Mr. Buchanan spent the Summer in Europe on business, returned to this country, and then, about Sept. 15, went over again. He did not go primarily on business for the State Department. Just what his immediate business was I do not know positively. As is well known, he represented various great American business concerns in their dealings with foreign Governments.

"His death will be a great loss and a fearful shock to thousands of friends all over the world. There are few men living who had so many friends, so widely scattered, and in places of so much prominence."

Huntington Wilson, Assistant Secretary of State, when the London dispatch was read to him, expressed himself as similarly shocked. He was loath to believe the identification could be complete. He paid a high tribute to the work of Mr. Buchanan during the long period of his connection with the State Department.

MRS. BUCHANAN PROSTRATED.

Husband's Legal Adviser Directs That Body Be Sent Home.

BUFFALO, Oct. 17.—Mrs. Buchanan was prostrated to-day by the news of her husband's death, which came in a brief cablegram from Claridge's Hotel. Henry Ware Sprague, Mr. Buchanan's legal adviser and a close personal friend, has cabled the American Embassy, requesting that all necessary arrangements be made to send Mr. Buchanan's body to the United States.

Since the close of the Pan-American Exposition, of which Mr. Buchanan was Director General, Mr. and Mrs. Buchanan have lived at the home of their daughter, Mrs. Charles H. Williams of this city. Mr. Buchanan had planned to make Buffalo his permanent home, and less than a year ago purchased a beautiful site on Gates Circle.

He left here four weeks ago, expecting to return about the first of November.

His Settlement of Disputes with Venezuela Considered a Triumph.

TO PREVENT ZELAYA'S FLIGHT.

Nicaraguan Rebels Aim to Get Control of Seaports.

BLUEFIELDS, Oct. 17.—It is reported here that Corinto, the principal seaport of Nicaragua on the Pacific Coast, is in the hands of the revolutionists, which would seem to indicate that the plan of Gen. Estrada and the other leaders embraced a simultaneous uprising at a number of points, especially at the seaports, to prevent the departure of President Zelaya from the country. If this report is true the revolutionists are now in possession of Corinto, Bluefields, Rivas, Cape Gracias, Rama, and Greytown. In addition they have occupied the telegraph station at Chile, near Rama.

Gen. Estrada, who has proclaimed himself President of the republic, has appointed Dr. Salvador Castrillo Minister to Washington. Assurances have been sent by Guatemala that that country will stand by Gen. Estrada and give him assistance. A steamer with Maxims and ammunition is expected to arrive here from Puerto Barrios on Tuesday. A Pacific steamer loaded with arms left San José, Guatemala, for Corinto on Oct. 14.

No reliable news has been received here from the interior. It is reported that Nicaraguans are returning from Costa Rica in large numbers. Troops are continually arriving here from Panama, and are being sent to Gen. Estrada at Rama.

Gen. Estrada's forces are advancing into Chontales, where they will be joined by Col. Osejo and a large number of troops. Gen. Juan Reyes, former Governor of the coast porvinces, is expected to arrive here to-morrow from Bocas Del Toro at the head of a force of Nicaraguan and Honduran exiles.

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 17.—A special from Bluefields, via wireless from Colon, says the town of Chile, an important point twenty miles above Nama, is in the hands of the insurgents. There was sharp firing for a time long before the place was taken. The leaders of the Zelaya and Estrada forces were both killed. It is reported that San Carlos, a strategic point on Lake Nicaraugua, has been captured by insurgents.

Passengers arriving here this afternoon on the steamship Dictator from Bluefields, Nicaraugua, brought further confirmation of the seizure of that city by the revolutionists, headed by Gen. Juan Estrada. When the Dictator sailed only the seizure of Greytown and Rama, in addition to Bluefields, had been reported. News from the interior was lacking.

Among the passengers on the Dictator was E. W. Trimmer, American Consul at Cape Gracias, Nicaragua. Consul Trimmer, who was in Bluefields when the revolutionists set up the standard of Estrade, states that no shots were fired and that no blood was shed.

Private dispatches from Managua, the capital of Nicaragua, deny that Corinto and Rivas have been taken, and say that President Zelaya expresses full confidence that the movement against him will be checked.

DISFIGURED, SHIELDS CULPRIT

Girl's Sweetheart Throws Acid in Her Face When Refused a Kiss.

Charged with throwing carbolic acid in the face of Dora Steinmenser, 17 years old, of 181 Second Street, in Stuyvesant Park, last night, George Albert, 18 years old, a grocer's clerk of 158 Seventh Street, was locked up in the East Twenty-second Street Police Station. The girl is in Bellevue Hospital, so seriously burned that she will probably be disfigured for life, and may lose the sight of her left eye.

Albert first denied and then admitted his guilt. The girl tried to shield him, but finally, after he had confessed, she told the whole story to the hospital authorities. It fitted exactly with the story Albert told the police.

According to these stories, Albert called at the Steinmenser home last night and asked the girl to go to the theatre. She refused, and finally compromised on a walk. Seated on a bench in Stuyvesant Park, Albert persuaded her to remove her veil, and then asked for a kiss. She refused.

"I'll give you three chances," he said. She still refused, and he drew a bottle from his pocket.

"Here's your last chance," he said.

The girl laughed at him, and he uncorked the bottle and dashed its contents on her face and neck.

"It was my laughing at him that did it, I expect. I don't believe he would have thrown the acid if I hadn't laughed," the girl told the doctors.

Though Albert's clothing was spattered with acid spots, he was not burned. He will be in Yorkville Court to-day on a charge of felonious assault.

The girl is an expert flower worker and earns good wages, her friends say. She was one of the prettiest girls in her neighborhood, with rosy cheeks, a mass of black hair, and big black eyes.

MAGOON MAY GO TO CHINA.

Appears Suddenly in Washington—Denies That He Was Summoned.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.—The arrival here to-day of Charles E. Magoon, former Provisional Governor of Cuba, gave rise to the rumor that he had been summoned in connection with the choice of a Minister to China. Mr. Magoon insisted that he had not been summoned by the State Department to report here, but he would not discuss the matter further.

The fact that Mr. Magoon returned unexpectedly from Europe lent color to the report. His physician last Spring, when this Government withdrew its guardianship from Cuba, ordered him to take at least one year's complete rest, advising an ocean voyage and a protracted sojourn in Southern Europe. Mr. Magoon's friends did not expect him to return to this country until the rigors of Winter had passed. He has the complete confidence of the President, and his administrative ability and tact won Mr. Taft's commendation on more than one occasion during the occupancy of Cuba.

Mr. Magoon will remain here until Nov. 1, when he intends to visit Ambassador Thompson in the City of Mexico, staying with the diplomat for the remaining six months of his vacation. His journey South, however, will take him through the territory over which the President will travel on his way back to the Capital, and it is regarded as certain that Mr. Magoon will not overlook the opportunity to pay his respects to Mr. Taft, even if the belief that a conference has already been arranged proves to be groundless.

HEARST SAYS GAYNOR IS RYAN'S CANDIDATE

Declares Interborough Stock Went Up When He Was Chosen Because Ryan Wanted Him.

HE RIDES IN RYAN'S AUTO

According to His Friend Block, Whom Gaynor "Put on the Padded City Payroll" at $50 a Day.

William M. Ivins and W. R. Hearst, who were jointly denounced by Judge Gaynor, Tammany candidate for Mayor, in his Brooklyn speech of Saturday night, for supposed friendliness to the traction interests, both issued replies last night.

Mr. Ivins, whom Judge Gaynor accused of being "pulled off" in the investigation of the Metropolitan Street Railway deals and of being now "over with the traction people and going about this city cheek by jowl with William R. Hearst," retorted that there was probably no more incompetent person in the city to solve the traction problem than Judge Gaynor, that the Judge seemed to forget that Tammany was responsible for the system of which he complained, and in fact, the Judge's mind seemed to be wandering.

Mr. Hearst's reply, issued late last night, retorted that Gaynor was nominated for Mayor by Tammany, not because Tammany wanted him, but because Thomas F. Ryan did; that the day after Gaynor's nomination Interborough stocks jumped, the preferred 2⅛ points and the common 1⅜ points; that he (Mr. Hearst) had heard from Judge Gaynor's friend, Rudolph Block that "every time Gaynor returned from the country Mr. Ryan's automobile met him at the station," and finally that Judge Gaynor was carrying Block "on a padded city payroll at $50 a day in order that he may exercise his peculiar qualifications in the exploitation of Judge Gaynor.

Hearst Accuses Gaynor.

Here is Mr. Hearst's reply:

"Judge Gaynor's intimation that I have become reconciled to Mr. Ryan is merely a part of his campaign of imagination relieved by vituperation. It reminds me in its absurdity of Mr. Roosevelt's fanciful creation of a combination between Mr. Rockefeller, Mr. Harriman, and myself, dissipated by my publication of the Standard Oil letters.

Ryan Wanted Gaynor.

"Now comes Judge Gaynor with his dream. First, he dreams a straw hat and a blue necktie for me, which is not so bad. Then he dreams sixty-five million dollars for me, which would be positively fine if it were only true. And, finally, he dreams a deep dark plot with my arch enemy, Mr. Ryan. This is a positive nightmare, and it must be that the indigestibles of the Tammany ticket which Judge Gaynor has swallowed, lie heavily upon his overladen stomach.

"Every intelligent human being knows that Mr. Ryan owns Tammany Hall, and that Anthony N. Brady's Brooklyn Rapid Transit owns the Woodruff Republican machine. Every intelligent citizen knows that the political combination in this city is merely a part of the traction combination, and that the game is Democratic heads the citizen loses, and Republican tails the traction companies win. Everybody knows now that Murphy nominated Judge Gaynor not because he wanted Gaynor, but because Ryan wanted Gaynor. And every business man on Wall Street knows that the day after Judge Gaynor was nominated, Interborough Traction stock jumped upward, the preferred from 48½ to 50⅝ and the common from 14½ to 15⅞.

"What a remarkable faculty the able Mr. Ryan has of always picking out for his political purposes some man like Jerome or Gaynor, who sounds well to the people when speaking publicly, and sounds still better to Mr. Ryan when speaking privately.

"Judge Gaynor's friend Block, upon whose veracity the Judge places so much reliance, once told me in the presence of Mr. Brisbane that nearly every time Judge Gaynor returned from the country Mr. Ryan's automobile met him at the station. I would not think of accepting this on Block's authority, and would never have quoted it on his authority, except for the fact that Judge Gaynor seems to have such confidence in Block, that he is carrying him on a padded city payroll at the public expense. Mr. Block has a signed contract with the Star Company to devote his 'entire time exclusively' to the creation of Hooligans and Alphonses and Gastons, and yet in defiance of law and morals Mr. Block is put upon the public payroll at $50 a day, in order that he may exercise his peculiar qualifications in the exploitation of Judge Gaynor.

"Oh, wise and upright Judge! What kind of guarantee is it of the economical administration that you propose to give the city when you are already illegally loading down the public payrolls with your personal friends for you personal ends?"

Gaynor's Mind Astray, Ivins Says.

The statement of Mr. Ivins said that Judge Gaynor's statement about the traction companies betrayed a marvellous ignorance of the case.

"His speech is very hard to follow," said the Ivins statement, "because it is evident that the poor man is wandering in his mind. The investigation was conducted with the utmost thoroughness, and was carried to the last step which was possible for anyone to take. The books which contained the key to the situation had been destroyed, and when Mr. Gaynor says that the investigation was discontinued, he is speaking in ignorance of the fact that for months, while we were investigating the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company, we were also trying to reconstruct the old books of the Metropolitan company, and that every ascertainable fact was referred by the Public Service Commission to the District Attorney.

"He speaks of the fact that by act of the Legislature the Rapid Transit Commission was empowered to contract separately for construction and operation. He, however, had nothing to do with that. It was my friends and myself, with the aid of Gov. Hughes, who secured the passage of that law.

"He speaks of the overcapitalization of the old companies. It was Gov. Hughes and his friends who made such overcapitalization impossible in the future by securing the passage of the Public Service Commissions law, and he knows, therefore, that his history of the past has no possible relation to anything that can occur in the future.

"He is very angry because, within three weeks after I began the investigation of these railway companies, I had demonstrated their insolvency and proved that this insolvency was due to the overcapitalization of which he complains.

"He talks bravely about what he will do in the future, and disregards the fact that if it had not been for the Legislature and Gov. Hughes, in passing the public service law, none of the things which he expresses a desire to accomplish could possibly be accomplished.

"The traction problem is one of the gravest and most serious awaiting solu-

25,000 AT COMMUNION.

Great Open-Air Gathering of the Disciples of Christ at Pittsburg.

PITTSBURG, Oct. 17.—The greatest religious gathering ever held in this city, and perhaps in the country, occurred at Forbes Field here to-day, when about 25,000 persons assembled at the ceremony of the Lord's Supper, the event being the principal feature of to-day's session of the convention of the Disciples of Christ (Christian Church.)

About 100 Elders and 1,000 deacons of the church officiated during the ceremony in passing bread and wine to the great gathering, while a choir of 500 voices led the music. Ideal weather added greatly to the comfort of those present.

Many of the pulpits in this city and those of surrounding towns were occupied to-day by delegates to the convention. Four big gatherings at the various convention halls to-night closed the day's programme. The principal sermons were preached by I. N. McCash of Berkeley, Cal.; M. M. Davis of Dallas, Texas; S. M. Martin of Seattle, Wash., and H. O. Breeden of San Francisco.

MOTHERS TO KEEP VOWS.

Their Children Restored, They Will Beg in Street for Church Funds.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Oct. 17.—The mothers of Grace and Tomasso Viviano, stolen ten weeks ago, held for ransom of $25,000, and found in Chicago, to-day welcomed them back to their home.

This week, in obedience to a vow which they made for the safe return of their children, the two mothers, who are both wealthy, will each devote a day to begging on the streets. The funds they collect will be given to St. Charles's Catholic Church.

When the train pulled in forty relatives rushed toward the sleeper where the fathers and children had berths. When the parents appeared, each with his child in his arms, the emotional relatives packed themselves about the car steps, each one seeking to smother Grace and Tomasso with caresses. Hurrying home, the father of Grace was met at the door by his wife.

"Oh! little Gracie!" she exclaimed, straining the child to her breast. "It has been so long, so long!"

Tomasso, screaming and kicking, was borne along by his father and arrived an instant after the greeting between Grace and her mother. His mother was there to receive him in her arms.

NAVAL TUG IN COLLISION.

Patapsco Run Into by Unidentified Vessel and Side Stove In.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, R. I., Oct. 17.—The naval tug Patapsco, bound from the New York Navy Yard to the Portsmouth (N. H.) Navy Yard, was run into yesterday in Nantucket Sound, near Handkerchief Shoals Lightship, by some vessel whose identity is not known here as yet. A large hole was stove in the Patapsco's side below the waterline, and to keep her afloat Chief Boatswain Edward J. Norcott, U. S. N., in charge, had her listed and bags and hammocks stuffed into and around the hole.

In response to a wireless "C. Q. D." sent from the tug and relayed by some other vessel to the torpedo station, the submarine tender Nina was dispatched, with orders to tow the Patapsco to the nearest port, and at 7:30 to-night another wireless from the tug, relayed by the revenue cutter Acushnet, said that the leak had been stopped and the water pumped low. The commander of the naval tug awaits good weather and the arrival of the Nina to proceed to Newport or Boston.

The Patapsco is one of the newest of the naval tugs, with 755 tons displacement, built of steel at the Portsmouth Navy Yard recently. Handkerchief Shoals Lightship is about fifty miles from Newport, and midway to Boston.

$400,000 BALTIMORE BLAZE.

Falling Walls Wreck Second Building and Injure Firemen.

BALTIMORE, Md., Oct. 17.—Fire to-day, starting in the large six-story double building at the southeast corner of Baltimore and Eutaw Streets, did damage approximating $400,000. By the falling of a large section of one of the walls upon an adjoining building, six firemen were slightly hurt and four others at other points received minor injuries.

The fire started from some undiscovered cause on the sixth floor, occupied by J. Schoeneman, manufacturer of trousers. On a lower floor was the establishment of Goldenberg Brothers, manufacturers of cloaks. The entire eastern half of the building was occupied by Frank & Adler, dealers in shoes. The flames were confined to this building, but damage was done by water and smoke in several others further from the corner.

While the fire was hottest there was an explosion, supposed to have been of an accumulation of gas from broken pipes, and almost the whole of the eastern wall of the Freidenwald building above the fifth floor crashed down upon 327 West Baltimore Street, wrecking it to the level of the second floor. This structure was occupied by Reinhart, Meyer & Co., wholesale clothiers, and the Monumental Custom Tailoring Company.

The losses are said to be fully covered by insurance.

GOVERNOR ATTACKS JUDGES.

Shallenberger Intimates That Politics Caused Bank Guaranty Decision.

Special to The New York Times.

LINCOLN, Neb., Oct. 17.—Gov. A. C. Shallenberger to-day issued a statement intimating that political considerations led to a decision yesterday by the United States Circuit Court declaring the Nebraska bank deposit guaranty law void. Judges Willis Vandeventer and T. C. Munger handed down the decision yesterday, saying in it:

> The act not only attempts to exclude individuals from engaging in the banking business, unless they do so through the agency of a corporation, but also attempts to impose upon them, as a condition to their engaging in that business even in that form, a duty to make good the obligations of all other bankers in the State to their depositors. We are of opinion that this cannot be done consistently with the Fourteenth Amendment to the National Constitution or with the State Constitution, and that the act is therefore void.

Gov. Shallenberger in his statement declares the guaranty law issue defeated the Republicans in the last campaign, and adds:

> The decision is not wholly a surprise. It is exactly what those who for partisan or selfish reasons are opposed to any effective guaranty of deposits law desired.
> It might be noted that the distinguished Democrat of this State, who was made a Federal Judge by a revered Republican President, was not called into judgement upon this case. It is idle to mince matters. The people have got to pay more attention to the character and quality of their Judges.

In conclusion the Governor holds that the jurisdiction and power of inferior Federal courts should be abridged by Congress, and that the setting aside of State laws should be left to the Federal Supreme Court.

AUTO SMASH KILLS MRS. BRUCE PRICE

Wealthy Tuxedo Woman, Widow of Architect, Flung Against Tree Near Arden.

HUSBAND PLANNED TUXEDO

Mrs. Charles J. Coulter, Owner of Car, Seriously Hurt—Accident on New Road Through Harriman Estate.

Special to The New York Times.

TUXEDO PARK, N. Y., Oct. 17.—Mrs. Bruce Price, one of the wealthy residents of Tuxedo Park, was instantly killed and Mrs. Charles J. Coulter was badly injured, sustaining a broken arm and a serious shock, in an automobile accident this afternoon on the road from Tuxedo to Arden. The other occupants of the car, Mrs. Coulter's twelve-year-old son, Charles J. Coulter, Jr., and the chauffeur, were only slightly hurt.

The machine, a large touring Panhard, was owned by Mrs. Coulter, who with her son started at 3:30 o'clock from her home in Continental Road in the park for a pleasure ride. She stopped at the home of Mrs. Price and invited her to go along. They were driven six miles to Arden and through the estate of the late Edward H. Harriman and were returning home when the accident occurred.

At a point a quarter of a mile east of Arden on the new highway built through the Harriman estate the chauffeur, John Skully, saw another motor car approaching and turned out for it. His car at the time was running at about fifteen miles an hour. The softer earth at the side of the road gave way under the right front wheel and the machine was thrown into the ditch, striking with great force against a tree beyond it.

Mrs. Price was thrown head first from the tonneau over the front seat by the impact, and her skull was crushed against the tree. Mrs. Coulter and her son and Chauffeur Skully were thrown to one side. Mrs Coulter struck on her side, with her left arm doubled up beneath her, and the son landed on top of his mother. The chauffeur, who was merely bruised, picked himself up and hurried to Mrs. Price, only to find her breathing her last. He then assisted Mrs. Coulter to her feet. Her left arm was broken between the elbow and shoulder, and she was in much pain.

Mrs. Coulter and the body of Mrs. Price were carried into the house of George E. Green near by, and Dr. Gordon of the Tuxedo Hospital and Dr. E. C. Rushmore of the Park were called. The physicians after examination said that Mrs. Price had been instantly killed, and feared that Mrs. Coulter had sustained internal injuries. The latter was taken to the Tuxedo Hospital.

The big Panhard touring car was a complete wreck.

Mrs. Price was the widow of Bruce Price, an architect of reputation, who died two years ago. Mr. Price, who was one of the foremost promoters of Tuxedo Park, planned many of the handsomest residences there. He also planned many of the largest stations along the Northern Pacific Railway.

Mrs. Coulter was formerly from Albany, N. Y., and has lived in Tuxedo for several years. She purchased the Griswold House three years ago.

Mrs. Bruce Brice, who has lived at 107 East Thirty-fourth Street and Tuxedo Park since the death of her husband, six years ago, was the widow of Bruce Price, for many years conspicuous as a New York architect. Before her marriage she was Miss Josephine Lee of Baltimore.

Her late husband entered upon his professional career in Baltimore in 1869, later establishing himself in New York City. During his residence in New York he was the designer of many public buildings and private country homes, notably Georgian Court, the residence of George Gould at Lakewood, N. J. One of his great mechanical and professional achievements was the laying out of Tuxedo Park and the designing and erecting of forty different types of dwelling houses. A later building, the residence of Addison Carmack, on a cliff overlooking Tuxedo Lake, was said to be the most artistic stone house in this country. Bruce Price died in Paris, France, in 1903.

Mrs. Price was the mother of Mrs. Emily M. Post, a well-known novelist, who divorced her husband, Edwin N. Post, two years ago.

MANY AUTOISTS ARRESTED.

Series of Accidents Also in Which Several Were Injured.

The police in and around New York arrested several speeding automobiles yesterday, and several were injured in accidents. Hugo Hezinger of 880 Lexington Avenue, chauffeur for Louis Wormser, the banker, of 836 Fifth Avenue, was arrested in the afternoon while speeding his car north on Riverdale Avenue, in the Bronx. Mr. Wormser put up $100 bail for the chauffeur's release, and they were allowed to proceed.

An hour later Policeman Zeh arrested Louis Victor Fletcher of 251 West Ninety-fifth Street, who was operating a motor cycle. He was released after putting up $100 cash bail.

While trying to pass another automobile early last evening in Westchester Avenue, the Bronx, Wilfred J. Larocque, a chauffeur, of 581 Teasdale Place, the Bronx, who was operating a large touring car belonging to P. J. W. Kelly of 312 Fairmont Street, Jersey City, collided with the machine ahead of him and was thrown out, landing on his head in the street. He was taken to Lebanon Hospital, where it was found he had a scalp wound.

A man who gave his name as Jallert Mahlstedt, a lumber merchant and candidate for City Treasurer of New Rochelle, was held in $500 bail for trial yesterday by Magistrate Corrigan in the Morrisania Court for speeding his automobile in Pelham Parkway on Saturday night. Another man who was speeding right behind Mahlstedt, and who gave his name as Eugene Bopinger of 1,344 Broadway, was held in similar bail. He furnished security for both himself and Mahlstedt.

Dr. M. A. Cohen of 458 Stone street, Brooklyn, was thrown out of his autobobile yesterday on the Highland Boulevard, Highland Park, Queens, when it became unmanageable. He fell under the machine, and when he was taken to the German Hospital in Brooklyn it was sa'd that he had a possible fracture of the skull. In the machine at the time were his two daughters, a friend, and the chauffeur. All were shaken up.

As he crossed Columbus Avenue at Sixty-fifth Street yesterday afternoon Dr. Charles Phillips of 35 West Thirty-eighth Street was knocked down by a taxicab and his nose and forehead cut. He went home after refusing to permit the arrest of the chauffeur.

Frank Mullins of Baldwin and Pavonia Avenues, Jersey City, was hit by a touring car while crossing Newark Avenue, near Barrow Street, that city, yesterday and knocked unconscious.

NO ELECTION BETTING SO FAR.

Anti-Gaynor Men Have Been Asking Big Odds for Wagers.

Local sporting men and politicians, who are usually only too ready to stake money on their personal opinions as to the result of the election, so far in the campaign have refrained from laying bets. A canvass of the usual betting headquarters yesterday revealed the significant information that there is no betting.

A well-known man in Broadway made a tour of the hotel bars on Saturday night, offering to bet anything up to $1,000, even money, that Gaynor will win. Every one he could interest, and they were not many, wanted odds averaging from 3 to 1 to 5 to 1.

LOSES LIFE GATHERING NUTS.

Boy Falls While Reaching for One and Is Impaled on a Tree Branch.

Special to The New York Times.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Oct. 17.—Twelve-year-old Leonard W. Tilmann died to-day in the New Rochelle Hospital as the result of having been impaled on a sharp branch of a butternut tree.

The lad, with several playmates, went nutting on the outskirts of New Rochelle. Leonard was in a tree top and was reaching for a butternut when he lost his hold and fell, landing on a jagged branch below.

SUES RAILROAD FOR $410,000.

Forest Owner Claims That Damage from Fire Fire Started by Locomotive.

MALONE, N. Y., Oct. 17.—Suit for the largest amount ever claimed in this State, it is said, for damage caused by forest fires, has been instituted by Charles H. Turner, who asks $410,000 from the New York & Ottawa Railway.

Mr. Turner's tract of land, known as Township 19, lies just north of Tupper Lake. Fire alleged to have been started by a New York & Ottawa Railroad locomotive destroyed a considerable portion of the forest two years ago.

BEAR KILLED IN CATSKILLS.

The First in Two Years—Sent to the New York Market.

CATSKILL, N. Y., Oct. 17.—The first bear bagged in the Catskill region for more than two years was shot on Black Head Mountain yesterday by John W. Whitebeck.

It was a black cub, weighing about 100 pounds. It was shipped to a New York market.

BALLOONIST THROWN OUT.

Airship Hits Roof of Shed in Presence of Austria's Ruler.

VIENNA, Oct. 17.—An alarming accident happened this afternoon when the dirigible airship Estaric, built by the Renner brothers, was ascending in the presence of the Emperor. The car collided with the roof of the shed. One of the brothers was thrown out and the car was partly wrecked. The balloon shot upward with the other brother and disappeared.

The aeronaut finally made a safe landing near Vienna.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 17.—M. Blériot, the French aeronaut, has made contracts for flights at St. Petersburg, Moscow, Kieff, and Odessa. He will arrive here early in November.

INTERNAL REVENUE GROWS.

Last Year's Receipts to be Exceeded by $12,000,000 or More.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.—The big increase in income from internal revenue continues and the reports received so far indicate to the Treasury officials that the collections during the current fiscal year will exceed last year's by between $12,000,000 and $15,000,000.

Since July 1, the beginning of the new fiscal year, the collections have aggregated $76,660,987, which is a jump of $3,873,062 over the same period a year ago. The receipts reported yesterday reached $914,100, an increase of $122,500 over the corresponding day of last year. So far this month the aggregate revenue has been $12,572,384, which beats the same period of last year by $913,799.

REJECTS MENTAL TELEPATHY.

Prof. Muensterberg Also Says Hypnotism Cannot Cure Disease.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 17.—Prof. Hugo Muensterberg, instructor of psychology at Harvard, takes issue with Bishop Fallows, J. D. Quackenboss, and his fellow instructor, William James, all sponsors of mental telepathy. He says that after years of studying every phase of the subject he is assured that such a phenomenon does not exist.

Mental telepathy is an utter impossibility, he declares, owing to the unlikelihood of any two minds being so finely attuned as to vibrate in unison at every phase of thought. Asked regarding hypnotism, Prof. Muensterberg said:

"I have placed over 200 subjects under a hypnotic spell and have never used the same method with any two alike. A variety of mental diseases, including a craving for stimulants, have been cured in this fashion. It is utterly absurd to declare, however, that bodily ills can be permanently cured by hypnotism. The pain may be alleviated, but the disease still remains."

EIGHT OVERCOME IN A FIRE.

Three Tenants and Five Firemen the Victims—Dog's Howls Save Master.

Fire in the cellar of 241 East Fifty-ninth Street, a five-story tenement, last night, filled the structure with a dense smoke which overcame three tenants and five firemen. All the tenants were quickly revived, and the firemen, after a breath of fresh air, returned to the cellar.

On the first floor lived the Reinach family, mother and son. The smoke did not reach their rooms until the hallway was completely filled, and, believing that the way to the street was cut off, Mrs. Reinach, followed by her son and his dog, started for the roof. Near the top the son was overcome by the smoke, unnoticed by his mother, who continued to the roof.

Many tenants hurried up to the roof, passing Reinach, unmindful of the howls of the dog standing over his unconscious master. Policeman Herzing finally heard the dog's howls, and brought the young man to the roof. Herzing also rescued Kate and Mary Hoey, sisters, who succumbed to the smoke on the stairway to the roof.

The cellar was filled with packing boxes, excelsior, electrical appliances, and paper, making a stifling smoke. The fire was extinguished after half an hour's work. The damage was slight.

VANDERBILTS ESCAPE IN A FATAL WRECK

President Brown and W. H. Newman Also Aboard Central Train Derailed Near Rhinecliff.

PIECE OF RAIL TORN OUT

One Man Hurled Through Window and Killed—Ten Passengers Severely Injured—Accident in Early Morning.

While speeding southward beside the Hudson River below Rhinecliff at 4:30 o'clock yesterday morning, the third section of the New York Central's Atlantic Express was thrown from the track by a broken rail. It fortunately ran away from the river. Only one of the eight cars was overturned, and only one person was killed and ten severely injured.

Two of the cars that left the rails were "The Idle Hour," in which W. K. Vanderbilt and W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., were traveling, and Special 99, in which were President W. C. Brown of the New York Central and W. H. Newman, a Director. The party had been on an inspection tour of the Central's lines. All were shaken up, but none injured, and they greatly aided in the work of rescue.

Dead.

KRAKOWSKI, JAMES, 21 years, 79 Eldridge Street, Manhattan; thrown partly out of a window and body crushed beneath overturned car.

Injured.

BONAD, SAMUEL, Second Avenue, New York; chest injured.

CZECHOWICS, NICK, Depew, N. Y.; right hip bruised and wrenched.

FRANCIS, ARGENT, Vincent, N. Y.; scalp wound.

HAMBURGER, MARY, 3 Linden Street, Utica; left arm slightly injured.

SCHOFIELD, W. F., Peekskill, a trainman; head and back bruised.

TEASDALE, Mrs. HENRIETTA, 281 Sixteenth Street, Manhattan; right arm deeply cut; cuts and contusions of head and face.

Piece Torn from Rail.

The train, which left Buffalo at 7:15 o'clock Saturday evening and was due at the Grand Central Station at 7:26 A. M., consisted of a baggage car, two express cars, a smoker, a day coach, two sleeping cars, and the two special cars. These latter had been picked up at Lyons, at which city the railroad officials had arrived after going over the Central's Pennsylvania lines. All the cars were well filled and many of the passengers in the day coach and the smoker were asleep.

A piece of steel which broke out of the centre of a rail on a sharp curve below Tower 68, just south of the Rhinecliff Station, was the cause of the accident. The defective rail was on the land side of the south-bound track, which is nearest the Hudson River. If the rail on the river side had split the train must have gone into the water. The broken section was not more than one and a half feet long. It was torn out of the rail like a piece of twisted pine.

The train was running at the rate of forty-five miles an hour when the accident happened. The engine, No. 3,565, a mammoth three-wheeled driver, passed safely over the defective rail, as did the baggage car and the first express car. The second express car swung its rear trucks off the track. The combination smoker was immediately behind and left the rails, and the others followed it and went bumping along the roadbed.

Prevented a Second Wreck.

As soon as Engineer Moses C. Wright felt the jar caused by the coaches behind him leaving the tracks, he put on the airbrakes and brought the train to a stop within 600 feet. Then he remembered that the midnight express from New York was nearly due, and ran down the track with a red lantern. The towerman at the same time set the signals warning trains from both directions, and in this way a double accident was averted.

Before the train came to a standstill the smoker had toppled over and was dragged along on its side. Under it Krakowskie was killed. The day coach and an express car were almost overturned. The others stayed practically upright. Passengers were thrown about and were badly shaken.

The trainmen, uninjured passengers, and men from the Rhinecliff station were soon at work rescuing the injured. In this task President Brown and the party of Directors took a large share. Orders were hurried along the line for assistance, and it was not long before a special train had brought physicians from Poughkeepsie. A special train, made up under orders of President Brown, brought to New York all the passengers who wanted to come, as soon as the tracks were cleared, in about three hours. Some of the injured were sent back to their homes.

What Railroad Officials Did.

President Brown and the Directors refused to discuss their part in the wreck. An officer of the railroad at the Grand Central Station, however, gave out this statement:

"President Brown and Director Newman and the elder and younger Vanderbilt were awakened, like every one else on the train, by the jolting of the derailed train over the ties. Their private cars had connected with the Buffalo train at Lyons after coming up over the Pennsylvania Division of the road. Together with W. C. Bower, President Brown's assistant, they dressed hastily and jumped out upon the roadbed and ran forward in the darkness.

"They found that one of the forward cars had been overturned and that the train crew were helping the passengers out of the windows on the overturned car's uppermost side. They found that one woman was more badly hurt than the rest, and helped her back into one of the private cars. Then they directed that all the injured passengers be helped along the roadbed to the Rhinecliff Station, which was less than a quarter of a mile back.

"There every one was cared for by the roalroad's physicians until, under President Brown's directions, a special train to carry them to the city was made up. About 7 o'clock, when the wreckage had been cleared from the track and the cars jacked back to the rails again, this special train brought the injured to this city, where they dispersed to their homes.

The party of officers had been on the semi-annual inspection of the Vanderbilt system. They had been as far as Chicago and St. Louis, and were ending their tour.

Officers Aid Injured Woman.

The injured woman whom President Brown and the Directors aided is Mrs. Henrietta Truesdale, whose husband is employed in the Standard Oil Company's works at Rochester. Mr. Teasdale is about to enter business in this city, and sent his wife and five children—Hattie, 10 years old; Frank, 8 years; Louise, 6 years; Otto, 4 years, and Emily, 2 years—on ahead. They were going to stay with Mrs. Teasdale's mother, Mrs. Wilhelmina Bohnke, at 231 Sixteenth Street, Brooklyn. They occupied seats in the day coach which was almost overturned. At about midnight Mrs. Teasdale put the four eldest children to sleep on four adjoining seats on the side of the train nearest to the river. On the other side she sat holding the baby.

"We had just passed Rhinecliff, and the conductor had just shouted 'Next stop Poughkeepsie,'" said Mrs. Teasdale yesterday at her mother's Brooklyn home, "when I felt our car bump fearfully three distinct times. There was a grinding noise, then a great racket beneath the car, as though the flooring was being wrenched to pieces. With my baby in my arms, I started to get up. But just then there was a still greater crash, and, baby and all, I was pitched through the window.

"Both of us struck on our heads on the cinder roadbed. My baby only had its face scratched. But I was stunned for a few minutes, and a deep gash in which a doctor afterward sewed twelve stitches was cut in my right arm. When I came to myself all the lights were out, and I lay on the roadbed in darkness. I thought immediately of my four elder children, none of whom was near me. I began calling 'Hattie! Hattie!' A man ran up and told me that they were all safe. After the car had toppled over they crawled along the floor till they reached the back platform and climbed down to the roadbed. There they huddled together crying until some kind strangers took them to the Rhinecliff station, where I afterward found them.

"As I staggered to my feet on the roadbed after coming to my senses a bareheaded man jumped out of the same car window I and my baby had tumbled from. He was shouting, 'Where's my hat?' 'Where's my hat?'"

Good Care Taken of Family.

Mrs. Teasdale had nothing but praise for President Brown and the Directors. She and her children traveled all the way down from Rhinecliff yesterday afternoon in the Vanderbilt private car, after it had been jacked back upon the track. She was accompanied by Dr. Fred A. Weaver. On reaching the Grand Central Station, through President Brown's instructions, she was placed in a private ambulance which had been waiting for her. The physician and a nurse went with her to Brooklyn. She wanted the children to go in the ambulance, but the railroad employes put all five in a motor car and sent them to their grandmother's home.

Krakowski Dragged Under Car.

The passenger who was killed was James Krakowski, 21 years old, of 79 Eldridge Street, Manhattan. He was a fruit peddler, and had an aged father and mother to support. With his partner, Hyman Levy, 24 years old, who was among the injured, he had gone to Chicago about a month ago. The men were ignorant of the city, chose the wrong places for their stand, and were returning to this city practically penniless, hoping to borrow money and start anew.

They were dozing in opposite seats of the smoking car when the accident happened. Krakowski had coiled himself up on a settee on the west side of the car, which was nearest the river. When the derailed smoking car turned over, after pounding along the railroad ties, Krakowski was pitched across it and partly through the window on the other side. His body was found by trainmen clearing away the wreck. It was partly underneath the lower side of the overturned car, and was badly mangled.

When the car turned over Levy's left arm was jammed and torn by some one falling on it, and his head and face were cut by falling glass.

"Krakowski, my poor partner, and I had been talking of how we should raise money to get on our feet again," he said yesterday. "But we both became sleepy after passing Utica and were dozing in seats on opposite sides of the car. Suddenly, in the midst of a dream, I thought a house had fallen upon the car. I have no idea of what was happening. I just found myself lying in absolute darkness in the midst of a shower of glass. Women were screaming, 'Help! Help!' We were like flies in a box. Every one was fighting, and I was afraid of being choked.

"Some one started to scratch a match, but before it was lit we all shouted: 'Don't light it. You'll start a fire and we'll all be burned to death.' After we had been in the dark car almost an hour the engineer climbed over the side of the car above our heads with a lantern. He opened one of the broken windows and helped us climb out. When I got out three gentlemen in shirtsleeves came up and took my name and address. I did not know who they were. But a woman with some children was so badly hurt that she kept fainting. So the three men who had taken my name took hold of her and helped her into one of the private cars in the rear, which hadn't been overturned, and took care of her and her children there."

The three men in shirtsleeves were members of President Brown's party.

The parents of Krakowski live on the top floor of 79 Eldridge Street. The telegram announcing their son's death reached them at the moment that a reporter called. When the father opened the yellow slip and read its contents he passed it to the mother in silence. Neither uttered a sound, but both tottered over to chairs beside the table in the living room and sat rocking. The elder Krakowski earns $5 a week in an east side tailor's shop. They have a younger son in Chicago, but the dead man was their chief support.

INQUIRY QUICKLY BEGUN.

Public Service Officers Examine the Rail and the Cars.

ALBANY, Oct. 17.—Upon the receipt of a telegram early to-day, notifying the Public Service Commission, Second District, of the wreck at Rhinecliff, Commissioners Decker and Sague and Inspector Buchanan left for the scene of the accident and began an investigation, which will be continued at Albany and New York.

The commission, in a statement to-night, says:

"The pieces of broken rail, which were the immediate cause of the accident, were shipped to the New York Central Superintendent's office in New York, after having been carefully examined by the Commissioners and Inspector. The investigation included close inspection of the cars in the derailed train and of cars in the train immediately preceding it, which were also injured by the broken rail, and were set off at Staatsburg, the station next south of Rhinecliff."

VAN DYKE ANSWERS ELIOT.

Says Harvard ex-Head's New Religion is Mere Afterglow of Christianity.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 17.—Prof. Henry Van Dyke of Princeton University delivered an address to-day on "The Church of To-day" at the closing service of the centennial celebration in the First Presbyterian Church of Germantown, in which he criticised the "new religion" set forth by President Emeritus Eliot of Harvard.

In the course of his address Prof. Van Dyke said:

"The journals tell us that a distinguished and justly honored man in America has recently been talking of a 'new religion,' in which Christ, as the Church has known Him, the revealer of the Father, the Divine Mediator, the Son of living God, seems to be unnecessary.

"There is much that is fine and beautiful in the words of this teacher of the new religion. But whence does it come? It is the afterglow of the old religion which led his forefathers. For him in the security of his virtuous heritage an afterglow may suffice, but not for the sinful, struggling, doubtful, suffering world. It wants more than an afterglow. It wants the sunrise of the living God in the face of Jesus Christ.

"Some men say: 'It is unreasonable that the Church of to-day must be bound to a Lord of yesterday, one who has passed away.' Is He, then, dead and gone? Ask the man broken down by the weight of his sin, who, upon his knees in supplication, feels the need of Divine forgiveness upon his brow. Ask the mother who hides her face upon the death of her little child, who says, 'Jesus, Thy will be done,' and rises to face the duties of the day.

"Dead and gone? No, my brethren, He is here, and the Church of to-day is built upon the assurance that He is living God. That is the message I would bring to-day to this church of my baptism, where my dear and honored father schooled me in the principles of the best and highest life. He gave me this message: 'Personal loyalty to Jesus Christ is the root and mainstay and heart of Christianity.'"

A MUSICAL CRITIC WHO NEVER HAD A MUSICAL TRAINING

Being an advertisement by Elbert Hubbard.

I KNOW a man in Buffalo, who had incipient nerv. pros.—that is to say, Nervous Prosperity. He owned more things than he could use. He was where he couldn't sleep very well, nothing tasted like mother used to make, and all entertainments were a bore.

I took the liberty of ordering a PIANOLA sent to this man's house on suspicion. Then I went over to show the man how to operate it.

My friend caught it, and when I was around there the other day, he was illustrating an impromptu lecture on music by playing from Mendelssohn, Chopin and MacDowell.

The music was medicine enough for him—it was all he needed—and he was happier and better than I had seen him for years.

In Ruskin's "Modern Painters," the argument is made that everybody should paint and draw in order that they may be good critics.

Your enjoyment of art requires that you, yourself, must have tried to create art; otherwise you are not able to sympathize with the master in his difficulties and rejoice with him in his triumphs.

That is to say, you must be a brother to the artist, in order to get the fullest degree of delight from his art.

The absolute truth of this statement never came to me until I tried to produce music by my own efforts.

There is music you admire, and then there is the other kind of music the kind you enjoy. One is a thing outside yourself, and the other is that which is very close home.

I discovered that any piece of music which I had played on the PIANOLA gave me an especial delight when I heard it played upon the stage.

In anticipation of attending a "Grieg evening" I set to work studying Grieg with the help of the PIANOLA. By playing over certain pieces I became sort of en rapport with the master. The harmonious discords that seem to mark his individuality appealed to me.

I got joy, before unguessed, out of that Grieg evening.

There is a great fascination in doing things for yourself. It kind of lifts you out of yourself, and gives you the pleasure of patting your cosmic self on the back.

Any exercise of our powers that produces harmony is a joy and a satisfaction.

By the use of the PIANOLA the performer accents, emphasizes, gives the crescendo and the diminuendo, not to mention the allegretto and the fortissimo—goes back and plays it over, if he wishes—calls in the family and the neighbors to listen, and thus gets at the heart of it, all by himself.

I am not an educated musician and yet mainly by my own efforts I feel on close and familiar terms with the great Music-Makers of history. The men are dead and turned to dust, but the record of their dreams survives, and I at will can produce their melodies. Richard Wagner could not perform his own scores on the piano. But I can repeat them on the PIANOLA, just as Franz Liszt played them. Wagner and Liszt are very near to me.

CAUTION: There is but one PIANOLA. Do not make the mistake of supposing because a music-store sells Piano-players that it sells the PIANOLA and PIANOLA Piano. Only the Aeolian Company makes the PIANOLA and PIANOLA Piano.

CITY HAD TO SUE GAYNOR FOR TAXES

Latest Charge Against Tammany Candidate Appears in the Republican Campaign Book.

MORTGAGE PUT ON THE CITY

The Last Six Years Have Doubled Its Debt—Estimate of Waste Puts It at $38,000,000 a Year.

"New York City's Opportunity" and "Tammany Misrule" are the two main topics treated in the Republican Campaign Text Book to be published to-day. As this is more or less of a taxpayer's campaign, the compilers regarded it proper to insert the following paragraph, containing the only reference there is in the book to the Tammany nominee for Mayor, though it cannot properly be classed under either title:

> Judge Gaynor failed to pay his personal taxes for 1906 and was sued, settling after service of process. His personal taxes for 1907 were paid a few weeks ago, after he had been warned that he would be sued again.

In the first main division of the campaign book there are sketches of the candidates and voluminous extracts from newspaper editorials regarding their qualifications. Under the head of Tammany misrule tables are appended to show that the increase of the tax rate during the last ten years, from 1898 to 1908, has been 100 per cent., while the increase in population has been only 35 per cent., and in the same period the city's debt has soared 131 per cent.

"The budget for 1909 amounts to $156,454,148, or 9 per cent., showing that the abnormal increase still continues, as the population increase was probably 3 per cent.," the campaign book says.

In analyzing the causes of the increased taxation and debt many instances of petty waste are cited with the big leaks. There is told, for instance, how twenty men worked four months sodding 150 feet of bank at Van Cortlandt Park, and how three Inspectors were set to watch one laborer, who had a short strip of gutter in Queens.

After showing how the burden of taxation is shifted by the property owner to the rent payer, who in the last analysis is the real taxpayer, the campaign book goes on to say that Tammany Hall has placed a mortgage on the city in the last six years. In connection with this it is said:

> The Tammany mortgage is no mere catchword. It has real existence in every dollar of the city's bonds issued to pay for the extravagances of the Tammany administration. The Hunt's Point Park purchase is a part of the Tammany mortgage. The millions wasted on the Catskill Water Supply project have all gone into the Tammany mortgage. When the McClellan administration came into office on Jan. 1, 1904, the net interest-bearing debt of the city was $435,392,160. On April 1, 1909, it had increased to $719,691,701, and by Jan. 1, 1910, when the Tammany administration goes out of office it will have advanced well on toward $800,000,000. The difference represents the mortgage that Tammany has placed on the city in its last six years of misrule. This burden is heavy, and must be carried now.

The administrative policy with regard to Subways under Tammany is thus commented on:

> Only $4,500,000 appropriated for transit out of over $329,000,000 of corporate stock issued by the Tammany administration! There is the story of transit congestion in New York City. Comprehensive plans have been prepared by the Public Service Commission and placed before the Tammany Board of Estimate. But no action has been taken. Crowding and congestion continue, to the discomfort and misery of the citizens, but greatly to the profit of the company operating existing subways and now having a monopoly. Competent authorities believe that the Tammany administration WASTES $38,000,000 a year in the purchase of supplies at exorbitant prices, salaries paid to useless officials, excessive awards for land, extravagant contracts, &c. A business administration would save money and build subways.

Under the head "Water Waste—Catskill Extravagance" the expenditures in connection with the acquisition and construction of the Ashokan Dam, as far as that enterprise has progressed, are analyzed and this conclusion is reached:

> It appears that for every $100 paid to the property owners by the City of New York for water lands in the Catskill development the citay will have to pay at least $40 additional for expenses.

The investigations of Borough Presidents, the Fire Department investigation which developed the "rotten hose" scandal, Tammany joy riding, the lease of the Chelsea piers, the story of Hunt's Point, and the neglect of tenements are other topics dealt with.

In reference to "joy riding," the assertion is made that under the last city administration the annual appropriations for automobiles to be used by city officials has increased from $150,000 to more than $750,000.

KEEPING GAYNOR BUSY.

He Expects to Make Many Speeches Before the Campaign Ends.

The plans of Candidate Gaynor for the coming week were taken, when announced yesterday, as plainly indicating that the talk which Mr. Gaynor had with Leader Charles F. Murphy of Tammany at the Hotel Knickerbocker after the Carnegie Hall rally last week had been fruitless of results. Mr. Gaynor will occupy the platform nearly every evening this week, and it was announced that he expects to make more than twenty speeches between now and election day.

Justice Gaynor's second speech in Manhattan will be made to-day at the noonday meeting of the Commercial Travelers' League, at 686 Broadway. Congressmen Fornes, Harrison, and Sulzer will occupy the platform with him. Arrangements are being made for an overflow meeting outside.

To-morrow night the Judge, with the other Tammany candidates, will address the ratification meeting in Tammany Hall itself. Two overflow stands will be erected, one at Irving Place and Fourteenth Street and the other in front of Luchow's restaurant. At the former there will be Italian and at the latter German speakers.

On Wednesday evening Judge Gaynor Robert R. Moore, and John F. Galvin will be the principal speakers at the ratification meeting of the Kings County organization in the Academy of Music, Brooklyn.

TELLS OF CITY WASTE.

Mitchel Outlines Needed Reforms In Managing Municipal Departments.

In an address yesterday afternoon before the People's Forum in the Masonic Temple, Lafayette and Clermont Avenues, Brooklyn, John Purroy Mitchel, the Republican-Fusion candidate for President of the Board of Aldermen, spoke of the great waste in the city departments. For one thing, he said, there were school sites worth $3,000,000 lying idle, while 47,000 pupils were on part time. The city, he said, needed more than anything else a proper knowledge of its own business affairs.

Control of departmental work, the standardization of specifications, honest, expert and prompt inspection of work done by departments, and constant inspection of work done by all committees, as well as control of supply purchasing bureaus were needed, he said.

WATCHING THE CITY BUDGET.

Municipal Research Bureau Gives Some Points About Special Bond Issues.

The second taxpayers' hearing on the budget estimates for 1910 will be held this morning at City Hall at 10:30. The Mayor will strictly enforce the rule that nobody will be allowed to talk who is not prepared to oppose or favor one or more of the principal requests from department heads which make a grand total increase of $28,000,000 over the budget for 1909.

Because this year's issues of special revenue bonds so far as spent must be paid out of the 1910 budget the Bureau of Municipal Research announced yesterday that it has compiled a list of all special revenue bonds authorized since Jan. 1, 1909.

Taxpayers who appear to-day for or against budget appropriations are advised that they will gain nothing by keeping an item out of the budget for 1910, if later that same item goes into the budget for 1911, because of special revenue bonds issued next year. It will be very much better, it is pointed out, to demand that anything that is known now to be urgent enough to justify special revenue bonds in 1910 should go straight into the budget at this time, and also that steps be taken to prevent bonds from being issued in 1910 for items refused now because not necessary.

All told, thirty-eight separate authorizations to cover deficits have been voted since Jan. 1. Bellevue and allied hospitals got $71,000 to meet a 1908 deficit and $10,000 for a 1909 deficit.

The Borough President of Manhattan got $82,844; the President of Brooklyn, $14,300; the President of Queens, $53,758; to meet a deficit for the final disposition of garbage, $60,458; the President of Richmond, $14,500; the Board of City Record, $87,000; the City Magistrates' Court, $750; the Coroners, $2,000; the County Clerk, $9,000; the Board of Education, $64,220; the Fire Department, $161,700; the Park Department—Manhattan and Richmond—$2,900.

The Department of Public Charities got allowances to meet seven deficits, among them being $7,200 for supplies and $27,800 for alterations to buildings in Manhattan, and $14,900 for the opening of the new Coney Island Hospital. The Department of Street Cleaning got $269,500. The Department of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity got fourteen allowances, all to meet deficits in 1909, the highest being $20,200 for salaries and wages in distribution ends. Celebrations have had $300,000, as follows: $250,000 for Lincoln Centenary, $25,000 for Hudson-Fulton Celebration, $20,000 for the Queensboro Bridge Celebration, and $5,000 for the Cleveland memorial exercises.

WHIRLWIND FINISH FOR THE CAMPAIGN

Fusion Managers Set a Lively Pace for the Closing Bannard Rallies.

HUNDRED NIGHT MEETINGS

Big and Little—Every Assembly District to be Stirred Up by Orators from Trucks.

More than one hundred meetings nightly will be the order for the two final weeks of the Bannard campaign. The leaders say it will be a whirlwind finish unlike any ever witnessed in a municipal campaign in this city.

In addition to the big meetings to be addressed by Mr. Bannard and the other candidates, orders have gone out for a meeting at every Republican Assembly district club nightly. Besides this two trucks from which cart-tail speeches are to be made will be sent into thirty of the thirty-five districts of Manhattan and the Bronx every night. From six to ten speakers will be supplied to each district from the Speakers' Bureau, and many district leaders have an additional corps of speakers. Samuel Krulewitch, in the Twenty-sixth District, for instance, maintains ten speakers in addition to the six sent from headquarters.

The largest rally of the week will be that scheduled for Carnegie Hall on Wednesday evening. Seth Low will preside and the speakers will include besides the candidates, Job E. Hedges and Attorney General Mayer. This meeting will be under the auspices of the Republican Club.

This evening a big meeting will be held at the Star Casino, Lexington Avenue and 107th Street. This is in the heart of a thickly populated section of the upper east side. The hall can hold alone 5,000.

Mr. Bannard will speak every week night from now until the end of the campaign. To-night his principal speech will be at the Star Casino. To-morrow, day and night, he will speak at seven meetings. The speaking schedules of the other candidates on the city ticket and on the New York County and Manhattan Borough ticket are almost as heavy.

BUSY WEEK FOR HEARST.

He Will Begin To-night with Four Speeches—Ivins to be with Him.

Like the other Mayoralty candidates, William R. Hearst is getting ready for a busy week of speechmaking. Beginning this evening with four mass meetings in Harlem and the Bronx, he is scheduled to speak four nights this week.

William M. Ivins will appear with Mr. Hearst at two meetings to-night. Charles S. Whitman is the only candidate on the fusion ticket scheduled to speak at any of this evening's Hearst meetings. Clarence J. Shearn and John Temple Graves are among the other speakers.

Mr. Hearst is reserving his greatest efforts for the last week of the campaign. Charles E. Gehring, manager of the Civic Alliance campaign, said yesterday that in all probability Madison Square Garden would be taken for one big Civic Alliance meeting before the campaign closes.

GEORGE ACCUSES IVINS.

Did Offer Henry George, Sr., a Tammany Nomination for Congress.

Henry George, Jr., issued a statement yesterday in which he declared that, despite his denial, William M. Ivins did guarantee his father a seat in Congress if he would withdraw from the Mayoralty race in 1886. In a statement a few days before his death Henry George told his son of the offer. Henry George, Jr., thus quotes the circumstance in his life of his father:

> Mr. Ivins insisted that I could not possibly be elected Mayor of New York. He offered on behalf of Tammany Hall and the County Democracy that if I would refuse the nomination for Mayor they would run me for Congress; select a city district in which the nomination of the two was equivalent to election; that I should be at no expense, whatever, but might go to Europe, or anywhere I willed, and when I came back should receive a certificate of election to the House of Representatives. I said to him finally: "You tell me I cannot possibly get the office. Why, if I cannot possibly get the office, do you want me to withdraw?" His reply was: "You cannot be elected, but your running will raise hell." I said: "You have relieved me of embarrassment. I do not want the responsibility and the work of the office of the Mayor of New York, but I do want to raise hell. I am decided and will run."

tion, but Mr. Gaynor's speech is the most conclusive evidence of the fact that there is probably no more incompetent person in the city than he to aid in that solution. He knows that there must be co-operation between the Board of Estimate and the Board of Public Service Commissioners, and yet just note the judicial temper with which he handles the situation. He says: 'I have a firm faith in Mr. Willcox, and I know Mr. Bassett from this borough. One is a Republican and the other a Democrat, but between the bad Democrat and a good Republican there is very little difference after all, and between a Republican scoundrel and a Democratic scoundrel there is no difference whatever. And that is as far as they ever get with their investigation into these things.'

"What this statement means Judge Gaynor possibly himself knows, but I defy any intelligent person to say just what meaning he wishes to convey with regard to the Public Service Commission. It is the capping illustration of his incoherence and disingenuousness. If he will only keep himself permanently before the city as an exhibit from now until election day I will guarantee his defeat by the largest adverse majority that has ever been cast against any candidate of Tammany Hall.

"He talks about the city's credit in a way which demonstrates conclusively that he knows nothing about it. He asserts, without waiting for the decision of the Court of Appeals, that we have a borrowing capacity of $150,000,000, but adds that even though we have only $15,000,000 borrowing capacity annually that will be enough, at the same time entirely overlooking the fact that if that be out entire borrowing capacity we shall need a very large part of it for docks, schoolhouses, station houses, engine houses, and street openings, and that it is not possible that it should all be applied to subway building.

"It will be noted, however, that while he is talking incoherently about the debt limit he is careful not to urge the passage of the Constitutional amendment. He talks about the fact that the franchise swindle is halted. He, however, had nothing to do with halting it; he knows that it cannot be repeated, and he knows that Gov. Hughes is the man who halted it, and that the whole credit is due to our friends and not to his."

Mr. Ivins said that a statement Mr. Gaynor made, to the effect that R. Fulton Cutting, formerly of the Citizens' Union, managed to get the city to buy the Thirty-ninth Street Ferry for the benefit of the Cutting estate, would have been all right if Mr. Cutting had any interest in the transaction whatever, and if such a thing as the Cutting estate existed.

"He forgets, moreover," said Mr. Ivins, "that if there was anything wrong about that transaction it was carried through by a government elected by the very men whose candidate he now is."

the Spring of this year resulted in the termination of the long-standing disagreements between the two countries, had an eventful career. He was appointed Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to the Argentine Republic by President Cleveland in 1894, and the first United States Minister to Panama by President Roosevelt in 1904. Because of his large experience in South and Central American affairs he was sent to Venezuela by President Roosevelt to represent the United States when the action of Holland's war vessels last year in seizing Venezuela's coast guard ships brought matters there to a crisis. It was Mr. Buchanan more than any other individual who brought order out of the existing chaotic conditions and made it possible for the United States to resume friendly relations with the South American power, after W. W. Russell, the American Minister there, had returned to this country following the severing of all diplomatic relations.

Mr. Buchanan was born in Covington, Miami County, Ohio, on Sept. 10, 1852. His parents were George Preston Buchanan and Mary Gibson Buchanan. He spent the early years of his life on a farm and acquired what education he could at the country schools in the vicinity. Both of his parents died before he was nine years old.

Early in his career he had a taste of politics, and liked it. He was engrossing clerk in the Indiana House of Representatives in 1874-5. In 1876 he moved to Piqua, Ohio, and learned the blacksmithing trade, but did not remain long at it. After traveling all over the country making a living at various occupations, he studied law for a time. In 1878 he married Miss Lulu Williams, daughter of J. Insco Williams, an artist of Dayton, Ohio. Attracted by stories of prosperity in the West, Mr. Buchanan in 1882 moved to Sioux City, Iowa, to take a position in the china store of his brother-in-law. For a time he was manager of the opera house there and also one of the organizers and managers of the first four corn palaces in that city. Mr. Buchanan did his share in making Sioux City the corn palace city of the world.

In 1894 President Cleveland needed a man for Minister to Argentina, and Mr. Buchanan was recommended for the place. He served for six years, until 1900. While on service at Buenos Ayres he became acquainted with leading statesmen of the South American and Central American republics. While in South America he was designated by the Argentine Republic and Chile as arbiter to fix the boundary between Chile and Argentina.

Resigning his diplomatic position after serving two years under President McKinley's Administration, Mr. Buchanan returned to the United States in 1900, only to receive another important recognition of his abilities, when in 1901 he was made Director General of the Pan-American Exposition at Buffalo. His administration of the exposition was considered a remarkable success. Shortly after its close he was engaged as the diplomatic agent for the New York Life Insurance Company.

In 1903 Mr. Buchanan was appointed the first United States Minister to the newly organized Republic of Panama by President Roosevelt. His selection was due to the fact that he was considered a trained and experienced diplomatic representative having special knowledge of the Latin-American races. He was appointed a delegate and Chairman of the United States delegation to the Third International Conference of American States held at Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, from July to September, 1906. He was appointed a member of the United States delegation to the Second International Peace Conference, at The Hague, held in 1907.

After years of patient waiting on the part of the United States, last Spring the prospects became bright for a settlement by a method satisfactory to this country of the disputed claims with Venezuela. The refusal of the Venezuelan Government to arbitrate them resulted in the Spring of 1908 in the breaking off of friendly relations between the two countries. Mr. Buchanan was appointed by President Roosevelt a special commissioner to go to Venezuela and negotiate for a settlement of the claims. The result of his negotiations was the execution of a treaty between the two countries. The officials at Washington, it was said, viewed with extreme satisfaction the result of Mr. Buchanan's work.

Mr. Buchanan's permanent residence had been in Buffalo since 1901. He is survived by a widow, a son, and a daughter.

GAINING STEADILY M'CARREN REPORT

Senator Able to Take Brandy in Milk and Is Resting Peacefully.

MORE HOPE FOR RECOVERY

Friends with Political Worries Kept from His Bedside—Committee Likely to Run Campaign.

At St. Catherine's Hospital, Brooklyn, last evening it was said that Senator Patrick H. McCarren had passed a restful and encouraging day and had suffered no relapse from the improvement in his condition reported on Saturday night.

Dr. Peter Hughes, who operated on the Senator, and is in direct charge of the case, had felt so much at ease as to the immediate state of his patient, it was said, that he did not deem it necessary to visit him in a period of eighteen hours. The physician's first appearance at the hospital yesterday was at 1 o'clock in the afternoon, this being his first visit since 7 o'clock on Saturday night, at which time he had expressed satisfaction and relief over the condition of the famous Brooklyn leader.

Yesterday afternoon, Dr. Hughes spent two hours at the hospital, although he did not put in all of that time at the Senator's bedside. He said that Senator McCarren's pulse was normal and regular. He also appeared to be successfully striving to restrain the nervousness which he had been exhibiting. In the course of the day he took small quantities of brandy in milk and this seemed to give him strength.

"I think that the Senator has greatly improved," said Dr. Hughes, "and I feel more encouraged than I did even last night. His chances of complete recovery seem to be steadily improving, and we should receive more assurance as to that in a day or two. His present condition is most favorable, and is giving his attendants and his friends much encouragement."

For fear that the excitement of talking might act as a check upon his improvement, Dr. Hughes gave directions that no one other than the physicians or the nurses was to be admitted to the Senator's bedside without special permission.

Gifts of flowers continued to pour into the hospital for Mr. McCarren, and a steady stream of telephone and other messages for him was received. It was said yesterday that his aged mother, Mrs. Mary McCarren, who is in poor health at her home in Berry Street, was still in ignorance as to her son's serious plight. She believes that he has been called away on urgent business.

There was much speculation in Brooklyn yesterday as to the course the Democratic Executive and Provisional Committees will decide to follow in regard to the campaign in the borough when they meet to-night. It is not believed that any one will be chosen to act as leader during Senator McCarren's illness. Probably a committee representing both the Executive and Provisional Committees will be selected to conduct the campaign. Thomas F. Byrnes, an anti-McCarren leader, and Thomas F. Wogan and Owen Murphy, McCarrenites, may be chosen from the executive members for this committee.

LONDON FERRER MOB CHARGED BY POLICE

Driven from Spanish Embassy—Hoots Heard in Buckingham Palace.

KING EDWARD IS BLAMED

Victor Grayson, M. P., Says He Could Have Prevented the Execution of the Barcelona Revolutionist.

LONDON, Oct. 17.—The red flag was raised in London this afternoon and a large mob moved upon the Spanish Embassy to make a demonstration of its disapproval of the execution of Prof. Francisco Ferrer, the convicted revolutionist, at Barcelona a few days ago. Several bodies of police were stationed at the approaches to the embassy and they drove off the crowds in their usual bloodless but effectual way. Nevertheless, considerable excitement and uneasiness pervaded the neighborhood. The groans and hootings were plainly heard in the embassy and at Buckingham Palace. No one was injured seriously, although the mounted police rode against the crowds and scattered them several times.

The trouble began with a mass meeting in Trafalgar Square, which was organized by Several Socialist and labor bodies. Several hundred of the members of these organizations marched to the square carrying red flags draped with crape and bearing inscriptions denouncing King Alfonso. A black-bordered banner was raised against the Nelson column with big letters that could be read from afar: "To hell with the murderer Alfonso."

After J. F. Green, Secretary of the "Friends of Russian Freedom," called the meeting to order, he read a telegram from the Countess of Warwick, saying:

"No words are too strong to express Europe's horror at the murder of Ferrer."

Several Laborite members of Parliament delivered vigorous orations. Victor Grayson of Manchester, the Socialist member, capped the climax by declaring that if the head of every King of Europe was torn from his body it would not pay half the price of Ferrer's life. He called the Russian Emperor "a dirty monster," and said that King Edward, who could have prevented the execution, was responsible for whatever might happen in England as a result of it. He demanded the expulsion of the Spanish Ambassador.

Strong resolutions were adopted before the meeting ended. Several thousand persons assembled in the square, the majority of them attracted by the same curiosity that would take them to the Suffragette demonstration. The Socialist societies, carrying their banners, marched in good order to the Spanish Embassy, singing revolutionary songs and hooting King Alfonso. A great rabble accompanied them, filling the streets.

It was dark when they reached the open space in front of the embassy, and they found that the square was filed with platoons of police. The embassy windows were dark and there was no sign of life there. The police would not let the procession enter the square, or even stop. The crowds were turned back and kept moving up Victoria Street toward the Parliament Buildings, singing, shouting, and groaning. The reserves were then brought up and they drove the mob into the side streets, dispersing it without serious trouble.

ATTEMPT TO DROWN PRIEST.

Paris Rowdies Try to Throw Him Into Lake After Demonstration.

PARIS, Oct. 17.—The anti-Spanish demonstrations culminated to-day in meetings and processions in the larger cities of France, organized by the Socialists and workmen's organizations. The leaders laid emphasis on the peaceful character of these demonstrations, and although violent speeches were made little disorder is reported.

In Paris the Government had taken elaborate precautions to prevent the recurrence of rioting. The procession passed through a double line of police and troops, but the leaders themselves furnished a line of pickets which aided in preserving order, and no collisions occurred in this city. The Socialist Deputies and Municipal Councilors headed the procession, which was composed of about 12,000 persons who sang the "Internationale."

While passing the Spanish Embassy and several churches there were cries of "Down with the clergy!" "Down with Spain!" but the majority of the paraders refrained from disorder of any kind, obedient to the instructions of the leaders.

After the procession had disbanded rowdies attacked a priest in the Tuileries Gardens and attempted to throw him into the lake, but the police rescued the priest. Only one shot was fired and twelve of the rioters were arrested.

In several cities the Socialist Senators and Deputies headed the processions. M. Jaurès, leader of the Socialists in the Chamber of Deputies, spoke at Lyons, and delegates of the General Federation of Labor at other places.

Alejandro Lerroux, leader of the Barcelona Republicans, who is now in Paris, in an interview to-day predicts a revolution in Spain and the establishment of a republic. He considers the execution of Ferrer the outcome of personal vengeance on the part of King Alfonso, who, he says, was always convinced of Ferrer's complicity in the bomb outrage against the King on his wedding day.

MANY ARRESTS IN BERLIN.

Police Oppose Crowds with Drawn Swords—Demonstrations Elsewhere.

BERLIN, Oct. 17.—Three meetings held here to-day to protest against the execution of Francisco Ferrer, under the auspices of the Social Democrats, were so largely attended that thousands could not gain admission. Violent speeches were made, and resolutions were adopted denouncing the execution as "the most hideous of all judicial murders," and conveying sentiments of brotherhood to the "tyrannized Spanish people."

After the meetings an attempt to hold a street procession was prevented by the police with drawn swords. There was considerable violence and stone throwing on the part of the demonstrators, and many of them were arrested.

BRUSSELS, Oct. 17.—Big Ferrer demonstrations were held in the principal cities of Belgium to-day. At Liege rowdies smashed the windows of churches and religious establishments.

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 17.—A Ferrer protest meeting here to-day was followed by an attempt at a demonstration before the Spanish Consulate, but the crowds were held in check by a large force of police.

BUENOS AYRES, Oct. 17.—Ten thousand people gathered to-day in one of the public squares and burned the Spanish flag and the portrait of King Alfonso. Resolutions to carry out a boycott on Spanish products were adopted. Similar meetings were held in many of the towns in the interior.

BOMBS FATAL IN BARCELONA.

Five Killed and 21 Wounded in the Last Four Days.

LISBON, Oct. 17.—Cable dispatches from Barcelona state that the situation there is increasingly disquieting. Twenty-seven bombs have been thrown in the last four days, five persons being killed and twenty-one wounded.

On Saturday an attempt was made to rush the fortress of Montjuich to release the prisoners. A bomb was thrown against the door, but it failed to explode, an dthe attacking party fled on the approach of the guards.

FREE MASONS ATTACK CHURCH.

Anti-Clerical Campaign in Italy Based on Ferrer Case.

ROME, Oct. 17.—All indications point to the fact that the extremists in Italy are determined to undertake an anti-clerical campaign, more vigorous even than that in France. This is being directed by the Free Masons, whose Grand Master has issued a most violent manifesto in behalf of Ferrer, recently executed, and against the Church. The manifesto says:

> Sacerdotal tyranny, still vermilion with Italian blood, imposed and obtained through childish fright and the cowardice of the Government the slaughter of an innocent man, who was not judged, but murdered. Italy, which has seen scaffolds reddened, fire applied to the stakes, and the slaughter even of unarmed women and children ordered by the Church, must understand its duty. Rome, which has inside its walls the Vatican that for centuries has supported all tyrannies from which, to our shame, the slaughter of Barcelona originated, must decree that the latest crime shall not remain unpunished.

An international subscription has been opened for the purpose of collecting funds to establish, in the piazzo of St. Peter's, facing the Vatican, Ferrer's Modern School, which was suppressed at Barcelona.

GENOA, Oct. 17.—A pro-Ferrer procession, in which many of the marchers carried flags draped with crape, one of them having a caricature of King Alfonso with the inscription "Alfonso is a monster," caused a fight with the police to-day. The police succeeded in capturing the offending flag, but little injury was done on either side. The procession was prevented from approaching the Spanish Consulate.

PISA, Italy, Oct. 17.—Cardinal Pietro Maffi, Archbishop of Pisa, and several Bishops, while attending the Congress of Secred Music here to-day, were hissed by the crowds, with cries for Ferrer

ANARCHISTS HERE ENRAGED.

Berkman and Emma Goldman Denounce Ferrer's Execution.

Several Anarchists, including Emma Goldman and Alexander Berkman, met in Clinton Hall, on the east side, yesterday afternoon, and in the presence of all their followers the hall would hold denounced the execution of Prof. Francisco Ferrer in Barcelona as "one of the most cowardly crimes ever committed under the name of the law." The sentiment was embodied in a resolution, which, coupled with a protest against what was termed the "illegal murder" of Prof. Ferrer, was adopted with a shout, in which every one except the police joined.

The police were there in force to see that the speakers did not go too far in their utterances against recognized government. They marched in just after the meeting started and took up positions along the aisles and in front of the stage. A stenographer from Police Headquarters was on hand and took a record of what was said.

The audience was told that conditions in this country are in some respects not unlike those in Spain, and that some day a man like Ferrer would arise here only to die a martyr to the cause of humanity's advancement, just as Ferrer has done. A funeral march was played when the meeting was called to order, and every one in the hall stood up until the last strains of the music died away

Harry Kelly, the Chairman, explained that it was to be a memorial meeting.

"We come here to-day as extremists and followers of that cause for which Prof. Ferrer laid down his life," said Mr. Kelly.

Thomas G. Bell was introduced. He said that Spain was the greatest stronghold for anarchism in the world. After going into the details of Ferrer's death, he said:

"Only yesterday we had a disgrace in this, our own country. Our President, Mr. Taft, supposed to represent all that is free and just in the country, met the President of Mexico and hobnobbed with him—a man who has suppressed education and made conditions in Mexico similar to those in Spain."

Mr. Bell was followed by Arthur Bullard, who, it was explained, was not a real Anarchist, but "a perfectly respectable citizen who won't hurt anybody." Mr. Bullard proved to be a degree more mild than the others.

When Alexander Berkman mounted the stage he was applauded loudly. "Why was the Spanish Government so anxious to murder Francisco Ferrer?" he asked. "Was it because he was an enemy of society or that he preached things which were not for the welfare of the people? No! Such a claim is not made by the Spanish Government. It is known that he was a humanitarian. They say he was an Anarchist. That is true.

"Every Government is opposed to free speech. Even this Government is showing signs that the expression of free speech and free press aimed against the capitalistic element of this country should be curtailed. Free speech is dangerous only to the enemies of the masses, of the working people."

Emma Goldman was cheered lustily.

"I came here to-day not to mourn the death of Francisco Ferrer," she said, "but to celebrate his death. His death will be a cause of inspiration to those who have lost heart in the fight to emancipate the human race. They have killed Ferrer because he committed the greatest crime any man could commit—in the eyes of the Church and the Government of Spain. He dared to think that a change in the order of things could be brought about through the mind of the young child. It was the crime all Governments abhor—the crime of thinking for one's self."

It was announced that a larger meeting of protest would be held in Carnegie Hall to-morrow night, at which the following would speak: Judge Samuel W. Seabury, Charles Edward Russell, Dr. Felix Adler, Charlotte Perkins Gilman, Edward F. Cassidy, Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, Prof. Melville Dewey, Bolton Hall, Morris Hillquit, Henry Frank, and the Rev. Thomas Slicer.

A meeting of representatives of Italian Socialist and Anarchist clubs, held yesterday afternoon at 310 East Twenty-sixth Street to arrange a meeting to protest against the execution of Prof. Ferrer, was disorderly from start to finish.

The wrangling began with the election of the chairman. The outcome of the meeting was that a mass meeting is to be called to be held in Carnegie Hall on Saturday afternoon at 4 p. m., to protest against the execution of Ferrier. Emma Goldman is to be asked to speak. The societies plan to parade up Fifth Avenue to the meeting, with flags draped in black.

STOP PHILADELPHIA MEETING.

Police Prevent Ferrer Demonstration, but Italians Denounce Executioners.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 17.—Attempts to hold a monster memorial meeting to protest against the recent execution at Barcelona, Spain, of Francisco Ferrer, were frustrated in this city to-night by the police, who refused to allow a large hall near the centre of the city to be opened, although those in charge of the proposed meeting had paid the rent in advance and held a lease for the property.

Balked in their attempt to use the hall, the speakers and many of their followers adjourned to the Radical Library. Here they started to get the meeting under way, when the police again interfered and compelled them to leave the building.

TAFT FAILED TO HURT MINNESOTA REBELS

His Winona Speech Resented and Regulars He Tried to Aid Are in Danger.

CANNONISM ISSUE GROWS

Unless Taft Breaks with Aldrich and Cannon a Movement Against His Renomination Will Come.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Oct. 17.—President Taft did not help himself in Minnesota by his Winona speech praising the Payne-Aldrich tariff law and defending Representative Tawney for voting for that bill.

The circumstances under which the President delivered that speech were so peculiar that it has taken some time for its full effect to become apparent. Gov. John A. Johnson, the Democrat who had won the Governorship three times on his personal popularity, lay dying in a hospital at Rochester, and the State was filled with grief for him. He had roused himself from his death bed to send a heartfelt message of welcome to the Nation's Chief Magistrate, and President Taft had replied in a telegram of fine sympathy. Everything tended to make the President's appearance of a non-partisan character, and his subsequent visit to St. Paul emphasized that situation.

For that reason comment on the Winona speech in the State press was somewhat delayed. The first of the papers to discuss it was The Pioneer-Press of this city, an old rock-ribbed Republican organ, and its frank disapproval was such as to evoke the immediate retort from certain of the smaller Republican papers in the country districts that The Pioneer-Press had become a Democratic sheet. But the tone even of these has turned in the last two weeks, and there is coming now a different line of comment, from which it is evident that the castigation of the insurgents delivered on that occasion by President Taft, along with his defense of the new tariff law, is not so well received up here.

It is evident that the insurgents he disparaged will not have any trouble on that account in gaining re-election. On the contrary, it already appears that at least one of the Minnesota Congressmen who voted with Speaker Cannon will have opposition for renomination solely on that issue. And it is declared by men familiar with the local conditions that if the nominating primaries were to be held this Fall Tawney himself would be defeated, despite the President's efforts in his behalf.

Actor Stirs Insurgent Feeling.

An extraordinary incident in a local theatre last night gives a clear line on the situation. Burr McIntosh was playing in "A Gentleman from Mississippi." It is a play that deals with the Congressional situation, and is full of the control which Aldrich and Cannon have on Congress and of insinuation that Senators and Representatives receive bribes about every other five minutes. There is one line which contains a distinct reference to the President, under the guise of a declaration that "we have a fat man in Washington who is doing very well." That line has not received a handclap in all the times it has been delivered here, and it attracted no attention when it was spoken last night. But last night something else happened which showed the temper of the audience with reference to Aldrich, Cannon, Taft, and the insurgents.

McIntosh was called before the curtain at the end of one act, and he proceeded to deliver an impromptu political speech, the like of which has not been heard in any theatre, in this part of the country at least, since theatres began.

"I am only a Senator from Mississippi," said the actor, "and have no part of importance in what is going on at the Capitol. I am one of the minority. The Senate is ruled by the Senator from Rhode Island."

At that there were a few handclaps and some boos.

"But," McIntosh went on, "I want to congratulate the State of Minnesota on having two men in the United States Senate who are a part of that gallant flying wedge of opposition that is going to continue growing and growing until it overcomes the influences that now rule things there."

He got no further. A perfect storm of applause broke out all over the house at this reference to Senators Nelson and Clapp. The audience cheered and cheered, and McIntosh ended the speech right there. It was decidedly the hit of the whole performance, and it showed what the people of St. Paul think of their insurgents.

Cannonism the Live Issue.

The fact is, as demonstrated by much talk of politics with men from all over this section of the country, that the real live issue of the Congressional elections of next year, as far as this neck of the woods is concerned, will be, not Taft and the tariff, but Cannonism, and mighty little else. Of course, Cannonism, in this section, includes Aldrichism, but the people recognize clearly that there is no way by which they can get at Aldrich, while there is a method that can be made very effective of getting at the Speaker. This country is busy, and is getting busier.

Prosperity did not wholly desert it during the money famine of 1907 and the months that followed, but business did feel that famine and there was a resultant stagnation. That is now rapidly disappearing, and shops, factories, and stores are feeling and showing the new conditions. In all this there is distraction of attention from the new tariff. Besides, what attention is still fixed upon the new law is divided by the contention of its advocates that the renewed prosperity is due to that law.

With the tariff admittedly failing as an immediate an exciting issue plenty of other material is coming up to focus attention upon Speaker Cannon and his power in the house. The Republicanism of this section is what is known in the East as "radical," and there is no doubt that some of it is so radical that it would find itself more at home in the Bryan camp than under the Taft banner. But the rank and file of the party here stands for what it always understood to be the Roosevelt policies, whether that was what Roosevelt and Taft stood for or not. This part of the party accepted Taft as its candidate last year with misgiving and uncertainty, solely because Roosevelt stood sponsor for him.

"What's good enough for Teddy is good enough for me," was the common explanation.

Taft Is Now Distrusted.

The inevitable result of this was that Mr. Taft went into the White House watched by the critical eyes of these radical Republicans. They followed his actions during the special session of Congress and the fight over the Tariff bill with anxiety, and the result has been disappointing to them. Many of them are now frankly distrustful of him. It is hard for them to believe that he will change his course in the sessions to come, and they expect to see him again working with Aldrich and Cannon to secure the corporation legislation he has promised, just as he worked with Aldrich and Cannon on the Tariff bill.

The prospect is not encouraging to these Republicans. Their disappointment over the tariff law is a realized fact. And as that is the only experience by which they can judge the President, they naturally expect a disappointment over the corporation legislation in the Winter programme. They would have been glad to have something reassuring from the President himself in the speeches he delivered on his Western trip. But they did not find it. On the contrary, they found him leading off with a gratuitous praise of Senator Aldrich, and then coming into their own State and telling them that the disappointing tariff law was the best ever passed by the Republican Party.

Now, the Minnesota Republicans do not accept any such assurance, even from the President. They reply that evidently they know more about the tariff than the President does, or else they say that he is only trying to smooth them down with a lot of taffy that he does not believe himself. This defense of the tariff in the Winona speech might not have cut much of a figure in subsequent politics in Minnesota if the President had not coupled it with his castigation of insurgents.

Resent Lecture to Rebels.

The Minnesota Republicans are rapidly coming to the conclusion that it was not fair or proper for the President to come into their State and lecture their own Representatives here. There is a growing feeling of resentment over it, and the insurgents are receiving commendation and assurances of support instead of criticism and rebuke. Clearly the President did not help himself in this State by that Winona speech. On the contrary, he increased the distrust of himself, and the watchfulness with which his course during the coming Winter will be followed.

It is a curious fact that the Des Moines speech, which premised so many things dear to the hearts of the Republicans of this section, should not have aroused more enthusiasm. Being such a flat-footed declaration in favor of the things that these people want most to see enacted into Federal law it stood to win instant and complete approval. But it has not done so. The reason is that it, too, is received with distrust. They say that the promises of Mr. Taft with regard to the downward revision of the tariff were even more distinct and explicit than those of the Des Moines speech for corporate legislation, and moreover were many times repeated both before and after his election to the Presidency. But these tariff promises were not carried out.

And on their experience with him what assurance is there that his corporation legislation promises will be fulfilled?

There is, in fact, but one thing that will fully restore the confidence of these people in the President. That is a break with Aldrich and Cannon. If that comes and the President makes a good fight he can have anything the Minnesota Republicans can give him. The politicians here say that the local situation is very favorable for the Republicans to carry the State at the next Gubernatorial election, thirteen months away. Gov. Eberhardt is pursuing a straight and popular course and one that is calculated to allay the factional strife that has defeated the party in the State elections of the three contests.

The situation is such that the politicians do not look to see the State turned over to the Democrats on the National ticket of 1912, even if Taft again disappoints the Republicans this winter on his corporation programme. But they also talk of sturdy opposition to his renomination in the convention of 1912, and the suggestion is met that at that convention Taft will be the candidate of the East—the States that opposed him last year—while the West, which supported him in 1908, will be against him in 1912. It will take next Winter to tell about that, however.

BUELOW BACK IN BERLIN.

Prince More Enthusiastically Greeted Than When He Was Chancellor.

BERLIN, Oct. 17.—Prince and Princess Bülow came to Berlin to-night for the first time since the retirement of the Prince from the Chancellorship. They are the guests of the Emperor and Empress, although staying at the Hotel Adlon. They will be present at the confirmation of Princess Victoria Louise to-morrow, and also at the birthday reception of the Empress on Friday.

Their rooms at the hotel are filled with flowers, among these being a piece formed of chrysanthemums, with the cards of Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg and wife, and an immense bouquet picked from the Imperial Chancellor's garden, inscribed: "From your old garden."

Prince Bülow was greeted by the crowds in the streets much more enthusiastically than when he was in office.

TRIP NOT PARTISAN, TAFT TELLS TEXANS

Appears in Southern State as the President of the Whole People.

DEDICATES AN ARMY CHAPEL

Sees Omen of Church Unity in Gathering—Rests on a Long Ride Through Lonely Texas.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Oct. 17.—President Taft's travels brought him to the Far South to-day. After twenty-one hours of continuous journeying from El Paso, he arrived in San Antonio at 7:30 o'clock to-night. A big crowd was gathered at the station, and the streets leading to the St. Anthony Hotel were lined with people. After he was received by city officers, the President was driven to the hotel, with an escort of cavalry.

Later in the evening the President went to Fort Sam Houston, where he assisted in the dedication and accepted on behalf of the Government a chapel erected at the famous old army post by the citizens of San Antonio. He had much to do, as Secretary of War, with the building up of Fort Sam Houston into a brigade post.

Among those who participated in the ceremonies were Bishop Johnson of the Episcopal Church, Bishop Forest of the Catholic Church, Rabbi Samuel Marks, and the Rev. J. B. Cleaver, president of the Ministers' Association of San Antonio. The President took this as a further indication of the view he has repeated several times, that the churches of the country are growing closer together on the common ground of the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man.

At Del Rio, Sanderson, and one or two other places he made brief speeches to station throngs which were made up in part of Mexicans, residents of the community, and farmers, who had driven many miles in their best Sunday clothes.

The President, at the Pecos River, passed over what is declared to be the highest and longest railway bridge of its kind in the world. The Pecos River runs in a rocky cañon 325 feet below the rails. The wind was blowing a gale as the train passed over the slender steel structure, and the engineer ran at what seemed to be a snail's pace.

In his speech at Del Rio to-day the President said:

"I am certainly very glad to see you looking so prosperous. A man has to travel about the country to know what this country is, and in going about incidentally he is able to show himself and let the people of the country see the man they temporarily have assigned to the position of Chief Executive.

"I don't remember that there were a great many votes cast in favor of assigning me to that position by this State, but I am not engaged in a partisan trip. I am only going abroad, trying to get information as to the condition of the country and the needs of the people. I am not here either as a Republican or a Democrat. I am glad to find in Texas, as in other States I have visited, that sort of welcome that comes to the head of a Nation, of which I am certain from your looks you are all proud. Everywhere I have been I have found that American determination to meet the problems and difficulties that present themselves and to make the particular community in which the people live a little better than other communities.

"We have not any particular nationality from which we are descended. We are a mixture of races and stocks of men, and I doubt not there are many here who will understand what I mean by saying that we are breeding to a certain type, and that type is the American type."

The President to-morrow morning will help to put in place the cornerstone of the nearly completed chapel, will review the troops stationed at Fort Sam Houston, and, returning to the city, will make an address to the people from a grand stand in Alamo Plaza. He will leave during the afternoon for Gregory, Texas, to spend four days on the ranch of his brother, Charles P. Taft of Cincinnati.

DR. COOK FACES M'KINLEY INQUIRERS

Not to Answer Questions, but to Say, Through Counsel, Why He Won't Now.

MAY ANSWER THEM LATER

Reply to the Kennan Analysis of His Food Supply, Secretary Says, Is That He Did Get Back from the Pole.

Dr. Frederick A. Cook appeared by invitation yesterday morning before the special committee of the Explorers' Club which is investigating the doctor's ascent of Mount McKinley, with a view to determining whether his assertion that he reached the summit is true. Dr. Cook took along with him his counsel, Henry Wellington Wack, under whose advice the explorer is now acting with respect to all phases of the Mount McKinley affair.

The Explorers' Club committee had sent word to the doctor, asking him to appear at the club rooms, and it was expected that the committee would have some questions to put to the doctor relating to the climbing of the peak. Whatever questions were in the minds of the members of the committee did not come out, however, as Dr. Cook, through his counsel, submitted a long statement, setting forth the legal side of the investigation as concerns Dr. Cook, and informing the committee that until the probe has proceeded further no defense to any charges will be put in by the explorer.

Dr. Cook appeared at the club rooms at 11 o'clock with Mr. Wack. The members of the committee, comprising Prof. Marshall Saville, Curator of Archaeology of the American Museum of Natural History; Caspar Whitney, explorer; Charles H. Townsend, Director of the Aquarium; Anthony Fiala, explorer, and F. S. Dellenbaugh, explorer, were all waiting for him. Besides these there was present Prof. Herschel C. Parker, who accompanied Dr. Cook on his trip to Mount McKinley and who is to make an attempt next Spring, with Belmore Browne, to scale the peak himself. Prof. Parker is not a member of the Explorers' Investigating Committee.

Before going to the club rooms Dr. Cook had been led to understand that the Explorers' committee was hostile to him and that he would meet with a frigid reception. When he entered the club rooms he found the committee cordial enough to bring back the smile that had left his face when he learned last week of the affidavit made by his former guide, Edward N. Barrill, who asserted that Dr. Cook did not climb to the top of Mount McKinley. Although it is said that certain members of the committee are of the opinion that Dr. Cook did not climb to the top of Mount McKinley, they did not allow it to show in their manner to the explorer.

Dr. Cook shook hands with the committee and with Prof. Parker. He and Prof. Parker had a few words together, in which the professor informed the explorer that he could not accept his invitation to make the ascent of Mount McKinley in company with Anthony Fiala to look for the records Dr. Cook says he left at the summit, the reason being that the professor and Mr. Browne were to make an independent trip. Prof. Parker said that he and Mr. Browne had decided upon the trip before Dr. Cook's request arrived. Mr. Fiala also declined the invitation, saying that he was not an experienced mountain climber.

Dr. Cook then addressed the committee, saying that he had come in response to their invitation, and was willing to tell the committee anything it wished to know, but he should have to defer to the advice of his counsel, who wanted to say something to the committee.

Mr. Wack then asked the committee if there were any charges against Dr. Cook. He was informed that there were none. He asked the committee what was the object of the investigation on foot, and was informed that the committee simply wished to ascertain, for the information of the club if Dr. Cook had really scaled the peak of Mount McKinley.

Dr. Cook's counsel thereupon drew from his pocket a few pages of typewritten manuscript and proceeded to read. The document set forth that Dr. Cook wished to know, before going into any answer of charges that might be brought, who were responsible for the investigation. This information was desired, the statement said, for use in the event that any later proceedings were decided upon by Dr. Cook. This was supposed to have reference to possible libel proceedings.

When Mr. Wack had finished he was informed that the committee had no idea at present of preferring any charges against the explorer; that the investigation was only undertaken to put Dr. Cook's Mount McKinley climb officially on the records of the club. If he had climbed to the summit of the mountain the committee wanted to know it, and if not it was only fair to the club to have that established. Dr. Cook was assured, through Mr. Wack, that there was no intention of throwing discredit upon his word.

When Mr. Wack had finished interrogating the committee, Dr. Cook expressed his satisfaction with the investigation as it was being conducted, and informed the members that he would be ready to appear before them later and answer any questions they might put. The explorer explained that he had to leave at midnight for his brief lecture tour in the West, but that he would return within ten days, when a date for his appearance before the committee could be fixed. If there were any charges to meet at that time, the doctor intimated, he would face them. There was another round of handshaking, and Dr. Cook left with his counsel to go back to the Waldorf-Astoria.

Dr. Cook was tired when he reached the hotel, and he instructed his secretary, Walter Lounsdale, to turn any callers away. The explorer had been on the move since his departure two weeks ago on the first part of his lecture tour, and he had lost so much sleep that, he told Mr. Lounsdale, he wanted to try to catch up, in preparation for leaving on the midnight train for Toledo. The explorer slept all the afternoon, and when reporters called to see him, they were told Dr. Cook must not be disturbed.

Mr. Lounsdale undertook to answer for Dr. Cook the attack upon Dr. Cook's assertion that he reached the north pole, made by George Kennan in an article in The Outlook. Mr. Kennan analyzed Dr. Cook's statement, as published in his story in The Herald, that he, his two Eskimos, and his dogs had subsisted on one pound of pemmican each during the supposed dash to the pole and back, covering eighty-four days. He found, according to the article in The Outlook, that, taking Dr. Cook's word for it, if he started with 800 pounds of pemmican on the eighty-four-day dash, there would have been only half a pound of pemmican a day for himself, the Eskimos, and the dogs, even allowing for the consumption of the dogs that died. The supply of pemmican, therefore, at the rate of one pound a day, Mr. Kennan reasoned, would have lasted only forty-two days. This would have meant starvation for the Cook party before they could have got back from the pole.

Dr. Cook admitted in his story of the trip toward the pole that he did not kill any game and that he, the Eskimos, and the dogs had to get along on the pemmican, excepting for the meat provided by a few of the dogs that died.

Mr. Kennan pointed out that other arctic explorers had found it impossible to subsist in those regions with less than 32 ounces of food a day. Shackleton's party averaged 32 ounces, Dr. Rae's 33.8, Schwatka's 35, McClintock's 40, Mecham's 40, and Peary's 40.

In summing up his calculations, Mr. Kennan declared that, if his reasoning was correct, Dr. Cook's assertion that he reached the north pole must be dismissed as an impossibility.

When an effort was made to get a statement from Dr. Cook upon this deduction, Mr. Lounsdale declared that Dr. Cook had already disposed of it.

"Dr. Cook's reply to that is," said the secretary, "that he got back from the north pole. That proves, he says, that he carried sufficient provisions."

Mr. Lounsdale added that Dr. Cook would soon have his complete proofs ready to send to Copenhagen, and that until then he would have nothing more to say on any phase of the polar controversy.

Dr. Cook's secretary got into communication yesterday with William Gray, manager of the explorer's lecture tour, and asked if the engagements in the West could be canceled, so that Dr. Cook might get to work on his proofs for the Copenhagen scientists. Mr. Gray said that he would be able to cancel all the engagements made for the doctor after the Minneapolis lecture of next Saturday night. The contracts for this week's lectures, the manager said, had all been signed and it would be impossible to call them off. Mr. Lounsdale informed Mr. Gray that the doctor later might be able to take up the balance of the Western tour, which had been planned to extend over an indefinite period. Mr. Gray gave no hint that the lecture tour would be taken up again, but said he would communicate with Dr. Cook after his return.

Dr. Cook has given up his idea of delivering a free lecture, at least for the present, at Hamilton, Mon., the home of Barrill. He sent word to the Mayor of the town on Saturday that he would be there next week, but after making up his mind late at night to cut his lecture tour short and devote himself to his proofs, a telegram was sent to Hamilton saying that the lecture would have to be abandoned.

"The doctor thinks he can rush them so that his proofs can be completed within a month after he comes back here," said Mr. Lounsdale. "There is much work to be done on them. He has all his notes and observations here, but has not looked at them since his arrival a month ago from Copenhagen."

"Commander Peary is able to submit his proofs this week to the National Geographical Society. Why does it take Dr. Cook so long to get his ready?" was asked.

"Dr. Cook has said that his proofs are not in shape to be sent to Copenhagen," the secretary replied. "Mr. Peary has had time to prepare his, but Dr. Cook has not, owing to his lectures. Now he is to devote his time to getting them ready."

"Didn't Dr. Cook have time to prepare his proofs while he was spending last Winter at Jones's Sound?" was asked.

"He wrote out his story of the trip to the pole when he was there," said the secretary. "He did not work on his proofs."

Dr. Cook kept to his suite in the hotel, and in that way avoided the reporters until it was time to go to his train.

SAYS ESKIMOS CONFIRM COOK.

Captain of Danish Steamer Convinced of Explorer's Veracity.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

COPENHAGEN, Oct. 17.—The Danish ship Godthaab, Capt. Serhoubye, has returned from Greenland. The Captain has seen Dr. Cook's records and is convinced of their truth.

He found at North Star Bay, north of Cape York, Eskimos who had heard Dr. Cook's Eskimos tell about Cook's long walk across the ice. After his observations one day he danced with the utmost gladness and shouted, "Tomorrow we will be there."

The Eskimos believed that their two countrymen had been to the north pole. Dr. Cook's Eskimos, he says, seeing the Godthaab, ran away, supposing that Peary was coming.

A native priest of North Star Bay intends to seek Dr. Cook's Eskimos this Winter.

VIEWS NAVAL APPRENTICES.

Admiral Rodgers Attends Inspection in Barracks at Newport.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, Oct. 17.—Rear Admiral Raymond Perry Rodgers, U. S. N., the new commandant of the Narragansett Bay Naval Station and President of the Naval War College, on invitation of Capt. William F. Fullam, U. S. N., commandant of the Naval Training Station, accompanied the latter on his tour of inspection of the Naval Apprentice Brigade in its barracks this morning and later watched the 1,300 young sailors march to their church service from inspection, headed by the station band and singing "Onward, Christian Soldiers."

Eight hundred of the apprentice seamen attended the Episcopal services conducted by Chaplain Cassard, and Admiral Rodgers and Capa. Fullam attended with many visitors from Newport. The rest of the brigade attended the Catholic services conducted by Chaplain McGinty. A feature of the services was the singing of hymns by the apprentice seamen and their singing of "The Star-Spangled Banner" and "America."

HENSON LECTURES ON THE POLAR DASH

Negro Who Accompanied Peary Makes Some Points Against Cook in Hippodrome Talk.

ANSWERS QUESTIONS WELL

Cook Couldn't Have Made an Arrow from His Sledge or Killed an Ox with It, He Says.

Matt Henson, the negro who went to the north pole with Commander Robert E. Peary, stood on the stage of the Hippodrome last night, and for nearly an hour answered questions put to him by an audience that had gone there to hear his lecture on the trip to the pole. The box office put the attendance at 1,800.

It had been announced that Henson would reply to any questions asked him, and the audience, which appeared, for the most part, to be friendly to Commander Peary, kept him hard at it. Many of the questions had to do with the assertion of Dr. Frederick A. Cook that it was he who discovered the north pole. Henson left no room for doubt, from his decisive manner of dealing with these questions, who he believes to be the only white man who got to the pole, and that man was not Dr. Cook. The readiness with which his replies were given deeply impressed the audience, and frequently he was heartily applauded. Henson was introduced by Herbert L. Bridgman, Secretary of the Peary Arctic Club.

He began the lecture by explaining pictures as they were thrown on a large screen that ran across the stage. These showed the progress of the Roosevelt from the time of leaving New York a year ago last July up to Cape Sheridan, the march of the Peary party across the frozen wastes of the arctic, and finally the little camp established by Commander Peary at the pole after he had arrived with Henson and the four Eskimos.

When the photograph taken of the camp at the pole was thrown on the screen William A. Brady, who helped Hensen with the announcements, exclaimed:

"We will now show you the only picture taken at the pole that has yet been shown here."

There was loud applause at this.

When Henson told the audience that he was ready to answer questions the rapid assault at once started. Sometimes half a dozen were fired at one time, and Mr. Brady had to ask the audience to wait, as Henson would answer all if given time.

"What was the lowest temperature you found on the trip to the pole?" was asked.

Henson replied that 59 degrees below zero was the lowest he had recorded.

"Dr. Cook said in his lecture that he found the temperature as low as 83 degrees," some one yelled.

"I don't believe any one ever saw such a low temperature, replied Henson scornfully. "There was no man ever made who could live in that cold."

"Could Dr. Cook have made an arrow from his sledge, as he says, and have killed a musk ox with it?" was asked.

"No, he could not," said Henson. "He could have made a lance if the sledge had been long enough to give him a good-sized strip of wood, but it wasn't that long. It would be impossible to kill a musk ox with a small arrow. Bullets are needed for that."

"How did the natives kill them before they heard of bullets?" was asked.

"They used ivory lances, five feet or so long," was the ready response. "They used meteorites at the end of their lances, and these sort of sawed the musk ox."

Henson was asked how much food was necessary to keep a man going in the arctic.

"A pound of pemmican a day would do it," he said. In answer to another question Henson declared that one white man and two Eskimos, with only 1,000 pounds of pemmican, could not go more than 350 miles.

The questions turned to the first intimation that Commander Peary had of Dr. Cook's assertion that he had discovered the pole.

"His Eskimos told us that he had claimed to have been to the pole when we took them aboard our ship at Etah," explained Henson. "They laughed at it and so did we."

"Why did you laugh?" demanded a voice.

"Because we knew it was impossible for him to get to the pole with two sledges and two Eskimo boys," was Henson's reply. "We had a suspicion all the time that he was going to make the claim."

"How did you come to suspect that?" some one wanted to know.

"Because," cried Henson, "he had claimed to have gone to the top of Mount McKinley and we knew that was not true. We heard before we left the United States that he was going to make the claim to the discovery of the pole."

Eskimo Map Disproved Cook's Claim.

Henson informed the audience that the Eskimos had shown on a map exactly how far Cook had gone, and it wasn't as far as the pole.

"Can they make maps?" was asked.

"They certainly can," replied Henson.

A man in the balcony shouted to Henson that Commander Peary, in his book published after one of his trips toward the pole, had said that he would not believe an Eskimo.

"I never knew Mr. Peary said that," returned Henson in a doubtful tone. "Anyhow, I'll say that I would believe an Eskimo as quick as I would any one else. I have always found them truthful."

Some one wanted to pin Henson down to a statement as to whether Commander Peary had made observations at the ninetieth parallel, but Henson replied that Mr. Peary's observations were on their way to Washington, and that he was not at liberty to speak for the Commander.

"I read Mr. Peary's story in THE TIMES and failed to see that he spoke of taking observations at the ninetieth parallel," insisted the questioner.

"He took three sets of observations at the pole," replied Henson. "He was there all right. You'll see all about it when the observations are published."

When some questioner mentioned Jones Sound, Henson quickly remarked:

"Jones Sound? Yes, that's where Cook discovered the pole."

MORE TRADE WITH JAPAN.

Increase Will Follow Visit of the Commercial Commission.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.—Extensive purchases in the United States by members of the honorary commercial commission of Japan of a large variety of manufactured articles, which heretofore had not found a market in the Orient, causes American trade experts to look for a heavy increase in trade between the two countries.

Baron Eiichi Shibusawa, Chairman of the commission, says:

"There is a large element in Japan today that opposes the introduction of what are called the new-fangled inventions of Americans. Usually some class of modern machinery unknown in our country, but about which vague rumors have been heard, is meant by the term 'new fangled.' Our merchants know that many of these machines could be used to advantage, but there is a prejudice against them which deters merchants from risking importations.

"In a measure our commission has come to the United States as a court. We will go home and report that many articles are manufactured in the United States that could be used in Japan to cheapen production along many lines. It is believed the people will have confidence in our judgment, for we are the representatives of the people—not the Government. Heretofore all commissions to the United States have been sent by the Government. They have not always been representative of the commercial spirit and the decisions handed down were not always accepted."

Purchases by members of the commission began at Seattle and have been continued in large cities clear across the Continent. Investments have been made in machinery used in the lumber industry, mining, milling, agriculture, fruit growing and fruit preserving, and labor-saving devices used in commercial offices and banks.

THE GAYNOR-TAMMANY ALLIANCE.

There is something puzzling in the spectacle of Mr. Gaynor as the candidate of Tammany, and the puzzle does not clear up as the campaign advances. All his professions and many of the acts of his life are in hopeless conflict with the known aims of Tammany and with the conduct it has always enforced on those who have taken office at its hands. If we accept the professions of Mr. Gaynor as sincere, we are compelled to ask how he persuades himself that he can carry them out against the determined and cunning men to whom he owes his nomination, and against the resistance of his colleagues in power who are notoriously hostile to his avowed aims and in full sympathy with this corrupt and conscienceless combination.

The answer, so far as an answer is to be had, is found in the peculiar mental makeup of Mr. Gaynor. The chief element in that is his extravagant conception of his own capacity and importance, to which is added a certain sentiment of sanctification. These are forces all the more unbalancing in their tendency because they are by no means unrelated to fact. Mr. Gaynor is in reality an able man, and he has done substantial service in the purification of the politics of his own borough. But on this basis he rests the assumption that his talents and his devotion are indispensable to good government in New York, and that no price is too high to pay for them—not even surrender to Tammany, which makes good government impracticable. The aim of which he is conscious appears to him so lofty that any means are justified that will secure to him what he may believe is a chance to carry it out. It is not necessary to question his sincerity. The old Puritans doubtless were convinced that the world belonged to the saints, and that they were the saints. And though they did not make an alliance with the most notorious evildoers of their day in order to seize their inheritance, they might have done so as logically as Mr. Gaynor has made his. The reasoning is the same. The twist in the perspective is the same. Sincerity, however genuine and profound, would not prevent very disagreeable and even disastrous consequences if the people were to give Mr. Gaynor the power he covets.

It is one of the usual traits of a mind possessed by the conception that sways that of Mr. Gaynor that it turns more naturally and eagerly to abstract notions than to reasoned conclusions. Thus Mr. Gaynor not only looks upon himself as a quasi-inspired reformer of politics, without whom reform would practically be unattainable, and to advance whom any sacrifice would be excusable. He cherishes certain abstract principles which he applies broadly to pretty nearly every situation. The chief of these is what he calls personal liberty. It is not easy to define, but it is easy enough to see what it leads to. It disposes him to look with suspicion and antipathy upon the use of police authority, which, under any decent form of popular government is, of course, essential to the preservation of order and the protection of the rights of law-abiding citizens. He looks on a policeman, especially if engaged in enforcing the law against practices such as gambling, that are widely indulged, and still more widely tolerated, as a minion of tyranny, who should be hampered whenever opportunity offers, and in any case roundly scolded. That this attitude toward the police is not safe, that it may be very dangerous, that it is grossly unfitting in a Magistrate, or even in a member of the bar, are considerations obvious enough to reasonable men, but beyond the perception of one who regards himself as an apostle of personal liberty. It is true that Mr. Gaynor sometimes takes the part of policemen, but it is only when they have been disciplined by their superior officer. Then he concentrates his animosity on the principle of authority represented by the Commissioner, of which subordinates are for the time being the victims.

It is interesting to note that a mental constitution of this sort, while it confers a certain air of strength and energy, tends in the long run to essential weakness. Thus it has brought Mr. Gaynor to an alliance with Tammany which, judged by his avowed purposes and the known purposes of Tammany, is grotesque. Should Tammany be able to reap from the alliance the fruit it seeks, and to land Mr. Gaynor in the Mayor's office, it would have little trouble in making him do its will, or in defeating any belated opposition he might show to it. It has already begun. At the outset he protested that he ought not to be held accountable for the low character of some of his colleagues on the ticket. Tammany has now brought him to the point of saying that he does not wish to be elected without these. Clearly there will be no great difficulty in forcing him to work with them and with the corrupt organization of which they are the recognized agents and representatives. When a man believes that the Lord needs him so badly in an office that he can properly bargain with the Evil One in order to get it, the chances are, whether the office be got or not, that the Evil One will have the best of the bargain.

PRAISEWORTHY PRUDENCE.

President Roosevelt's trust busters, it will be remembered, got a judgment of dissolution against the Tobacco Trust, accompanied with a decision giving the trust a clean bill of health as a trading concern. The court found and declared that consumers of the trust's products had not been charged higher prices, that the producers of tobacco had been fairly treated, and that the competitors of the trust had not been subjected to unfair competition. Nevertheless the court did not see its way to uphold the trust, because it existed in contravention of a "drastic" and "revolutionary" statute, which it was of the first importance to every business concern to have interpreted finally. Accordingly the court gave a judgment against its argument to facilitate an appeal to the final authority. On Wednesday the Government, when the case was called before the Supreme Court, asked for delay. Why?

Attorney General Wickersham alone knows, but there are concurrent facts which possess apparent significance. The Government's brief was already in type when the court in Indiana blocked the Panama libel case in an opinion whose language is an indictment of President Roosevelt's law and lawyers, such as no American court ever expressed against any Administration. The court apprehended grave injury to our form of government if the Federal Administration were allowed to drag into a chosen jurisdiction those whom it disliked, and deprive them of their right to a trial by a jury of their vicinage. Is it possible that Attorney General Wickersham has no fancy to be placed in the same category as the lawyers who took their law from the Executive?

In a commercial sense this tobacco case is as important as the Panama libel case in a political sense. In mere size the defendant corporation is second only to the Steel Trust, but the law takes no note of mere magnitude. The principle concerned submerges the individual defendant. On the same day that the Tobacco Trust brief was for the time suppressed there were announced two little trusts. The Continental Telephone Company, which was chartered on Oct. 8 with $50,000,000 capital, absorbed the Keystone Company. The joint concern covers many cities and States. The Journal of Commerce announces a combination of pine timber concerns involving capital of $30,000,000. There is nothing peculiar about these combinations. They are among a multitude whose organization has survived every attack, and all of which must go down together if the Tobacco Trust must be dissolved. In other words, in the language of the decision in the tobacco case, it is a "revolutionary" statute which Attorney General Wickersham so prudently postponed asking to be upheld, according to a judgment procured by his predecessor so light-heartedly.

The case is now set for Dec. 13, against the protest of the defendants. This is an international combination, and their counsel had come from across the ocean, to a hearing sought by the Government, and they disliked delay. What can happen to make the Government better prepared for the argument then than now? Would the decision in the Oil Trust case have that effect? Does the Attorney General prefer a full bench? Or does he find his brief little to his mature liking? Whatever the explanation, it is to be regretted that the case will come on at a time to arouse the statesmen who will then be reassembled at Washington. Their contempt for law and decisions rivaled the high example set them, and their denunciations of the trusts overruled both the facts and the law as found after months of tedious trial and certification by respected Judges. There are no men of business so small or so great as not to be interested in the final settlement of these momentous questions, now deferred by act of the Government.

WELCOME THE POWER TRUSTS.

Shall water-power, generating electricity, "move the world"? That is the prophecy of science. Then large Trusts, or one gigantic Trust, should be organized to develop it. Under individual exploitation few water-powers are developed. By organization their strength is now greater than the strength of all the horses in the country; but it must be increased tenfold to meet the growing demand. It is rather an encouraging sign, therefore, and not at all to be deplored, if "two or three of the large power companies" have "acquired possession of a great many smaller power companies" throughout the country. This report, first made by Mr. Herbert Knox Smith, is now being used as an indictment by public-spirited but mistaken citizens in their coming "fight" against the power companies in Congress.

If they are to bombard them, it is better that the power companies should have a few heads, and bigger ones, for their marksmanship. If they wish merely to persuade them to submit to reasonable control by the Federal Government, with which the right to grant the principal permits is lodged, the big organizers should be more amenable to reason. On every account it is a matter for congratulation that organization is simplifying the water-power situation.

CONCENTRATING ON BANNARD.

It is well that the energies and eloquence of all the other candidates on the Fusion ticket are to be directed for the next fortnight to the election of Mr. Bannard. The candidate for Mayor himself has grown greatly in public esteem as his personality has been impressed upon the voters. With no pretensions as an orator, the simplicity and clearness of his utterance, his coherent expression of the issues of the campaign, have had a good effect on all who have heard him speak, and he has drawn large crowds in all parts of the city.

Mr. Bannard's fitness for the Mayoralty is now well understood. He is precisely the man for an office in which unusual business ability, skill as an organizer, a large practical knowledge of finances, and unblemished integrity are essential. He appeals strongly to all the independent voters of both parties who best comprehend the present needs of the city. His associates on the city ticket are now reasonably sure of election. It is gratifying to learn that they realize the wisdom of working with vigor to secure his election. The success of the whole Fusion ticket is desirable and it may be secured by determined and intelligent effort.

DEMOCRACY AND MATERIALISM.

While he was serving in Berlin, as an exchange professor, Dr. Felix Adler learned that although the Germans admire our initiative, our inventiveness and our native faculty of organization, yet they deplore our materialism. A distinguished German said to him: "Democracy spells materialism." This is probably as true as most aphorisms built on the same time-honored plan. Nevertheless, Dr. Adler says that the centres of German idealism, the universities, are thoroughly democratic. In Prussia a college President is elected for one year. Here we elect college professors for life. Perhaps this shows that we seek to preserve the ideal through our universities, while the Germans, having such a profusion of idealism, are careless about guarding it.

Anyhow, if we lack idealism, we are ever seeking the ideal energetically and variously. If the Germans do better than this they must realize their ideals, and an ideal realized is no longer an ideal, but a reality. Ideals, as a matter of fact, cannot be rounded up. There are no statistics of ideals. They frequently go hand in hand with materialism. The seeker for money often needs it to pursue his ideals. This suggests that we may have not fewer ideals than the Germans, but more expensive ones. We are not quite so eager to crystallize our ideals in the form of big battleships, but that may come later.

Dr. Adler suggests, as a proof of the comparative simplicity of life in Germany, that they have nothing there to correspond with the "so-called four hundred." Some millions of our fellow-citizens have been convinced that there is nothing like it here. Years of patient seeking have failed to reveal it to them. That is, after all, only one of our ideals. That nothing like it is discoverable in a country where they have a purely materialistic society based on the court of "the most gifted and fascinating among European sovereigns," and an aristocracy, is natural. The "ripeness and richness" of German scholarship are beyond question. Not all of it is learning without education. The whole world owes much to German scholarship, and we Americans are still beginners in that field. We have ideals, however, even in that direction.

SIDIS OF HARVARD.

Perhaps President Lowell thought incidentally of William James Sidis, aged 13, and a candidate for entrance at Harvard, when he conceived his plan to bring the freshmen together in a group of dormitories and dining halls under the comradeship of older men. For he remarked in his inaugural address:

> Such a plan would enable us, also, to recruit our students younger, for the present age of entrance here appears to be due less to the difficulty of preparing for the examination earlier than to the nature of the life the freshman leads.

Not because they feared he would fail to qualify, but because, as Dr. Lowell observed, "the change from the life of school to that of college is too abrupt at the present day," the college authorities might have rejected this application of young Sidis, the second application in two years. Sidis's marvelous progress under his father's tutelage was recounted yesterday in The Sunday Times. His proficiency, his bodily vigor, and the fact that he had already experienced college life at Tufts sufficed this time to secure the admission at Cambridge of this 13-year-old "prodigy."

That he is no prodigy, but a normal boy trained from his earliest years to think vigorously, is the contention of his father, who has applied practically in the upbringing of his son certain laws of the mind which he has observed in common with Prof. William James, after whom the boy is named. The "law of reserve energy," which Prof. James formulated in a popular article published last year in The American Magazine, serves to account for young Sidis's apparent precocity. It is the familiar principle of "second wind." Fatigue increases to a certain critical point, when it passes away, and we are fresher than before. Athletes, especially runners, win their victories according to this principle. Indeed, it has been observed that a third and a fourth "wind" may be attained by unremitting effort. But it is a phenomenon observed outside the field of athletics, according to Dr. James:

> Mental activity shows the phenomenon as well as physical, and in exceptional cases we may find, beyond the very extremity of fatigue-distress, amounts of ease and power that we never dreamed ourselves to own—sources of strength habitually not taxed at all, because habitually we never push through the obstruction, never pass those early critical points.

And he adds:

> It is evident that our organism has stored-up reserves of energy that are ordinarily not called upon, but that may be called upon; deeper and deeper strata of combustion or explosible material, discontinuously arranged, but ready for use by any one who probes so deep, and repairing themselves by rest as well as do the superficial strata.

Possibly this boy does not owe to inborn genius his ability to absorb thus early knowledge of languages, history, sociology, mathematics, and the sciences that might well be envied by college graduates. It may be due largely to effort and application healthfully exerted. At any rate, the fact that it is common for boys in England and on the Continent to master groups of studies at a considerably earlier age than in this country shows too plainly that our methods of education are slipshod.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

"Charity" and "Chances." When William A. Coakley, the labor leader and Committee of One Hundred man, said at one of last week's political meetings, "I am not in favor of charity," a good many of his auditors hissed. Thereupon he repeated the statement, and again he was hissed, but when he explained that what he did favor was the rendering of services that would do away with the necessity for charity and give every man a chance the manifestations of disapproval turned to applause.

The incident was significant in that it showed Mr. Coakley to be more advanced than the majority of those who heard him, since he shares the views of all enlightened philanthropists in regard to the almsgiving which was once considered so virtuous and so profitable—especially to the almsgiver. It also showed that the old, bad ideas as to mere giving, regardless of its almost inevitably and invariably pauperizing effect on the receiver, are still so widely diffused that any adverse characterization of charity excites indignation. But though Mr. Coakley knows something which others do not he still is not as well informed as he might be, or as he should have been before he attempted to criticise Mr. Bannard.

For Mr. Coakley is absurdly wrong in assuming that Mr. Bannard is an exponent of the old-fashioned charity—the charity of the Lady or Lord Bountiful type—the charity which contents itself with bestowing upon "worthy" objects of beneficence "a smile and a flower and a pound of tea." Instead he has been long and efficiently connected with the efforts of acknowledged experts in social work whose aim is not the relief of misery, but its prevention and cure in exactly the ways which, we like to assume, have, as they deserve, Mr. Coakley's warm approval. Of course these efforts involve some almsgiving, but it is always reluctant, always with realization of its danger, and always with a hope of soon substituting for it wiser and more promising measures.

Mr. Coakley, and all who labor under his mistaken notion, should learn what the Charity Organization Society has to say about Mr. Bannard's philanthropical activities, and especially about his services to the Provident Loan Society. He would find that he could learn from the object of his criticism much more than he could teach him about right and wrong charity, and that their opinions differ little about "giving a man a chance."

Denmark Should Not Wait. At last even Denmark and the scientists connected with the University of Copenhagen are beginning to show signs of impatience at Dr. Cook's delay in offering his "proofs" for competent examination. It was time they did. It is also time for them to deprive Dr. Cook of his one even colorable excuse for the withholding of his documents.

As long as he can say that he is bound by his promise to submit the records of his expedition first to his learned friends in Denmark he has a specious answer to make to propositions that both he and Commander Peary at once present their claims to carefully selected and disinterested American experts. In the circumstances the Danes only expose themselves to misinterpretation by waiting for him to ask them to annul the obligation, while by abrogating it voluntarily they would not injure, but confer a very real benefit upon him—assuming for the sake of the argument, of course, that his story of his trip to the pole is true. If it is false he wants further delay for reasons with which the Danes certainly do not sympathize.

Dr. Cook, in no small part because of the countenance he received in Copenhagen, is reaping with assiduous industry a harvest which is honestly his only on the assumption that he discovered the pole. His right to that harvest, as the Danes now realize, is in serious doubt, and, as his best friends, they should be the first to reproach him for prolonging the uncertainty. The question of their competency, either absolute or relative, has not been raised by anybody—it is admitted by everybody.

The talk now coming from the Danish capital about Dr. Cook's American "enemies" is absurd. He has no enemies here, and were he to demonstrate the validity of his claims it would be recognized as readily and as unanimously here as in Denmark. It is not as if the rival claimants for polar honors were of different nationalities, and only one of them a citizen of the United States. In that case American arbiters would not serve. As between two of our own men, with nobody denying that at least one of them gained the top of the world, neither right nor propriety demands that the case be settled abroad.

The thing for the Danes to do, and to do at once, is to give Dr. Cook some good advice, and the best they can give him is to grant the reasonable request of our Geographic Society. Then he will have to do so, or by refusal force us all to consider him a rival, not of Peary, but of De Rougemont and Baron Munchausen.

TAMMANY OFFICE HOLDERS.

Would Like to Know Attitude of Candidates Toward Them.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The Fusion ticket is about the best that can be produced, and I firmly believe it will be elected, but I think that an expression of opinion from the various candidates as to their attitude toward the hordes of Tammany, who have grown rich and fat at the expense of the taxpayers, should be forthcoming.

Judge Whitman has expressed his intention, if elected to the office of District Attorney, not to appoint any assistant who has been affiliated with Tammany Hall. Will the other candidates say something as to what their intentions are?

If the old Tammany hacks are to remain, then the work of the Committee of One Hundred and other kindred bodies will be in vain, and when the Fusion candidates are elected to office they will find another case of where the tail will wag the dog.

Mr. Bannard is my choice for Mayor. He was personally unknown to me until a few days ago, when I paid a visit to his campaign headquarters, accepting the invitation extended through the public press that he would be pleased to see all comers. I found him a gentleman of distinctly democratic type, and from the conversation I had with him formed the opinion that he was the sort of man that New York wants as Mayor. Of the three candidates for Mayor at present in the field there can be no doubt but that Mr. Bannard by his business knowledge and acquaintance with financial affairs outranks his competitors, and therefore I trust The Times will continue to give him its support. He does not believe in mud slinging, but in his speeches hits straight from the shoulder. I hope therefore he will take an early opportunity of stating his contemplated attitude toward Tammany office holders after he is elected. W. H. L.

BANNARD AND HEARST.

Gives Meaning for Ballot Cast for Either of These Men.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

While William R. Hearst might fill with glory and distinction the office of Mayor of New York; while he may be all that an able man should be, his complex interests, his tremendous wealth, immediately make him a conspicuous target for those who rail against the rich, and who imagine that the wealthy have no regard for the poor.

On the other hand, Mr. Bannard is a man of moderate means, favorably known in charitable circles as a man willing to give of his time and money to improve the condition of the worthy, and known throughout the business and financial world as a man of his word.

Therein lies the argument for Bannard's election to the office of Mayor. Therein lies the reason for my appeal to the many thousands of voters whose suffrage can elect Bannard. Mr. Hearst's name will go down in history as the man who sacrificed himself in order to get decent government for the City of New York. No man will deny the fact that, by consenting to run for Mayor of New York, Mr. Hearst will defeat Gaynor and help to elect Bannard. It is therefore meet and proper that the main body of voting citizens realize their duty to the city and to the Nation. They should vote either for Bannard or Hearst.

A vote for Bannard means a vote for decent, honorable government. A vote for Hearst means the sure defeat of Gaynor. No great calamity would befall the city if either Bannard or Hearst should win, but it will mean the doom of honest administration if Tammany wins this election.

Brazen as these Tammanyites are, irresponsible as they have been to the people, hardened as they are to public opinion, they still can be made to realize that they have gone far enough; that the people have called a halt; that their reign of corruption and graft is at an end for all time. Would Discuss Amendments.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Four proposed amendments to the State Constitution will be submitted to the voters in the next election. It seems to me that the majority of the voters are usually unacquainted with such amendments or what they are supposed to amend, as hardly any mention is ever made by the papers. It is true that these propositions are usually advertised in the newspapers, but how many know about them until they see them on the ballot, and then it is too late to make a judicial decision. Do you not consider that such matters should be discussed before voting time arrives? If the papers would print the proposed amendments, perhaps an intelligent opinion could be reached, either approving or disapproving the new propositions.

RUSSIANS IN AMERICA.

Editor Russian-American Echo Thinks They Would Not Care to Return Home.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In your issue of Oct. 13, speaking of the statement made to The Russian-American Echo by Prof. Paul N. Milukoff, the Russian historian and leader of the Constitutionalist Party, you do not in your article give full justice to Prof. Milukoff, nor to the thousands of Russian readers of your paper, nor to The Russian-American Echo, of which newspaper I am the chief editor.

Not all Russian-Americans will return to Russia, in the event of a new, free Russia. The majority of them feel themselves, perhaps, very much at home right here, in America. A good many of them have children, raised and schooled in America; these children grow up patriotic Americans, they know nothing of, nor would they care to live in Russia, and their parents must remain Americans for the sake of such children. Similar is the case with people in business, or with the professional men, who have established themselves here.

Although each of these Russians here, within his means, does all he can for the promotion of justice, constitutional Government, and liberty in Russia, yet, certain ties prevent him from returning to his fatherland. He remains an American, he loves its liberty, its great institutions, but at he same time hates the negative side of the American life. He hopes and patiently waits for the time when all those agencies of oppression and destruction will in turn be destroyed by the coming American reform Government, the people.

A Religious Physician.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

"H. P. F.," whose letter appeared in your issue of the 12th inst., seems to think that the public is protected from medical quackery. This is an error. For example, I have recently seen a letter sent by one of the largest sanitariums in the country to a man who had written to ask for information in which the following assertion appears:

> A million people die in the United States every year, of whom at least four-fifths could be saved by the physiologic methods of the —— Sanitarium.

If this is not quackery, then what does the word "quackery" mean? Yet the head of this sanitarium is a physician who is usually regarded as a religious man!

HEALTH BRANCH AT CORNELL.

State Hygienic Laboratory Will Have Department There.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., Oct. 17.—In connection with the central department at Albany, a branch of the State Hygienic Laboratory has been established at Cornell University to serve the needs of the surrounding counties. Commissioner of Health Eugene Porter and Dr. William Gill, head of the laboratory at Albany, were here this week attending to the details of the construction of the new department. It is located in Lincoln Hall, the civil engineering building. Dean Haskell and Prof. H. N. Ogden, hydraulic expert for the State Health Department, will have supervision over it.

Dr. Porter said that this new laboratory would enable the State to have systematic inspection and control over public water supplies in this part of the State, and would also provide for inspection of sewerage, milk inspection, and sputum analysis. He also thinks that it means the eventual foundation at Cornell of a State school of sanitarians.

TEACHERS' SALARIES.

A Question of Whether Men Are Needed in the Public Schools.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In view of the so-called "equal pay" campaign which is being so vigorously waged by the women teachers of the city, I venture to request space in your esteemed paper to discuss what appears to me to be some of the important issues involved in this controversy.

The whole problem resolves itself into this query: Should we or should we not have men in our schools? If the answer is given in the negative all the difficulties vanish. The course of action is perfectly plain. Pay such salaries as will attract the most competent women and employ no more men. Of course, men of inferior abilities could be obtained at a low price, and the lower the salaries the more incompetent the men. But, as between a competent woman and an incompetent man, there can be no question of choice. Dispense with the man.

If, however, it should be decided that a few men relatively are necessary in the schools; if it is conceded that in the upper grades of the grammar schools for boys and in High Schools for boys men are desirable; if it is clear that boys from 14 to 20 can be more successfully trained by men for a professional or business life in a world of men, then it must inevitably follow that these men teachers ought to be of highest ability and character, such men as can not only instruct, but also inspire the boys and young men under their care. As a corollary to the above it follows that if thoroughly trained, competent men are to be secured the inducement must be sufficiently large to attract them.

It would seem unwarrantable extravagance to pay nine women much more than their market value in order to secure one man at his market value. No business man in his right mind would be guilty of such folly. If the woman's work was equal in every way to the man's, not in a mere technical sense, but from every point of view, the employer would engage her, pay her a wage sufficiently large to retain her in his service, and not employ the man. If, however, for some special reason he needed a man just because he was a man, not because he could take dictation faster, talk more fluently, or was quicker at figures, but because for a certain class of his customers a man was required, then he would engage the man and pay him a wage sufficiently large to secure and retain his services, regardless of whether this wage was greater or smaller than that of the women employed in his business. If it were necessary to pay more than the women received he would not feel that he must raise the pay of every woman in his employ who happened to be working in the same department for which the man was engaged.

Finally, if woman's influence on boys and young men is the same as man's, if the boy can develop equally robust and manly qualities and come forth from his school days as well equipped in body and mind for the business of life under the exclusive tutelage of women, then there is no place for men in our schools, and the sooner they are removed the better for the community at large. It is an outrage against the public to pay salaries for men if women can do the same work as well and at smaller cost. A still greater outrage would be to retain a few men in order to furnish an excuse to pay artificially high salaries to a large number of women.

East Side Subway.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

How near are we to having a Subway on the east side? Every once in a while I see a notice of spasmodic activity on the part of the Public Service Commission, and then long-continued silence.

That populous portion of the city extending from Fifty-ninth to 125th Street and from Fifth Avenue to the East River, has no way of getting directly over to the Hudson River. Why wouldn't it be possible to build a subway from the entrance to the Queensboro Bridge, Sixtieth Street and Second Avenue, to Ninety-sixth Street and Broadway, with stations at Seventy-second Street and Lexington Avenue, Eighty-sixth Street and Madison Avenue, and Ninety-second Street and Central Park West? This would give immediate relief, and allow transportation up or down town, on either the Broadway or Lenox Avenue route.

THE CONSTANT VISITOR.

I am the Tariff—I am quite invisible, and yet you'll find a little share of me in everything you get. I am a quite unwelcome guest, but when the table's spread I come in and sit down with you and get my meat and bread. I make your first acquaintance when you are too young to know, and afterward I stick to you no matter where you go. And all your life, whate'er you do or how you chance to fare, I never miss a single chance to come and get my share. And you may think you will escape, but ere your life is through you'll be surprised how readily I get my hooks on you.

I am the Tariff, and I feed on almost everything. My appetite is much the same in Winter, Fall, or Spring. I'm always right beside you when your bills are paid to see you don't forget the modest share that's set aside for me. I am benevolent, for I build Infant Industries, but in my work I always try to get my bread and cheese.
I might say I'm omnivorous, for everything I see I take a bite of and it all seems to agree with me. No matter how you struggue, I am with you to the end, and I take my percentage of whatever you may spend. You may think I will miss you, but the dream is quite untrue, and ere you are aware of it I'll have my hooks on you.

I am the Tariff that it took nine million words to frame. I am reduced substantially but left about the same. I'm low on ferrosilicon and clay and man-ganese, and you won't feel me quite as much if you subsist on these. I'm pestered by reformers who would like to see me drop, but when we get together I come out of it on top. I've been abused so roundly and my praise so loudly cried I must be Dr. Jekyll with a dash of Mr. Hyde. Just now a new commission is engaged in study deep, but when I get around to them
I'll put them all to sleep. I'll mix them up with figures till they choke and gasp for breath, and if that doesn't settle them I'll schedule them to death. For men may come and men may go and skies be gray or blue, but I am never worried, for I'll get my hooks on you. J. W. FOLEY.

AMERICANS VULGAR, THE GERMAN IDEA

Dr. Adler Says They Look on Us as a Nation of Mere Materialists.

KNOW LITTLE OF US, HE ADDS

Even the Educated Classes Have Only a Meagre Knowledge of the Real America.

For the first time since May, 1908, Dr. Felix Adler yesterday addressed the Society for Ethical Culture in Carnegie Hall. He told his audience of his work in Germany, where he was for more than a year as one of the Exchange Roosevelt Professors, delivering lectures before the students of the University of Berlin.

Dr. Adler described many of the ethical conditions obtaining in Germany. It had been his task, he said, to try to make Germans have a better understanding of Americans, and now he purposed acquainting Americans with a better idea of Germans and Germany.

Especially was America charged abroad, declared the lecturer, with gross materialism. He lamented the absolute ignorance of this country among Germans, and especially did he emphasize the fact that abroad Americanism was synonymous with vulgarism.

"My mission," said Dr. Adler, "was academic, and essentially in the interests of peace. Anything that can be done and step that may be taken to avert the awful calamity of war is for the betterment of modern civilization. Taken all in all, I feel that my mission was worth while.

"The great peril that hangs over our civilization is the danger of a great conflagration. Unfortunately, international relation is a tie that cannot be depended upon, being too shifty in its nature, and a selfish one while it lasts. Old friends of to-day become enemies of to-morrow. The greatest safeguard is, perhaps, the fear of calamity.

"How little Europe knows of us! How little we know of Europe! If a better knowledge obtained, there would be no Anglophobia. The educated classes, even, have little understanding of the deeper life of their neighbors. We are still in the cockcrow of civilization.

"The exchange professorships are intended that the resident of one nation may be an interpreter to another—a thing that books cannot teach. My mission was in many ways favorable. My Harvard colleague and I were early received by the Emperor. Had I not known his exalted position I would still, notwithstanding that fact, pronounce him a fascinating gentleman.

"Germany has a great admiration for us—our inventions and our capacity for organization, but, on the other hand, it has a contempt for what it terms our gross materialism, not a pleasant thing for American ears, I admit, but in it there is so much truth and so much falsehood.

"I endeavored to tell them that we were not altogether a material people and set forth facts of our idealism, based upon our history. I pointed out how the ideals of our people had succeeded. Surely the men of our Revolutionary days and the men who fought in our civil war were not materialists."

Dr. Adler then told of the great eagerness of German students to learn. They cared, he said, more for the matter than the manner. The schoolboy spirit so noticeable in this country in the colleges was noticeably absent there.

Talking then of German life, Dr. Adler said he had been impressed with the tremendous changes in that country during the last ten years. It was commercially a nation of great power, and no longer a people of thinkers and dreamers essentially, he said.

"This change is due," continued the speaker, "to the excellence of militarism there and the application of science that has regenerated German life."

Dr. Adler then told of the freedom of the intellectual life. No attempt was made, he asserted, to check or control the teachings of the professors in the universities. There was absolute liberty of thought and an aristocracy of thought and of letters.

Wealth, insisted Dr. Adler, did not count in Germany as elsewhere, so far as obtaining social position is concerned. Despite its pageantry, the conventions of the German Court were simple. Germany had nothing which compared with America's so-called "Four Hundred."

"The majority of German people, however, are still monarchical in their tendency," said Dr. Adler, "and the social democracy there represents the minority. They regard government as a specialization, and not a function for every one, as we regard it here."

But when it came to a religious or ethical advancement, Dr. Adler said there was none.

MORAL AWAKENING NEEDED.

Dr. Peters Says That and Not Legislation Will Cure Divorce Evil.

The Rev. Dr. John P. Peters, rector of St. Michael's Church, discussed "Marriage and Divorce" in the crypt of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine yesterday afternoon, declaring that it is not legislation but moral awakening that is needed.

"In our Western civilization," said Dr. Peters, "especially our American civilization, we are now according the woman a place which she was never accorded before. She is coming to her rights, as the helpmeet of man, not his property and not his inferior, but his partner and coworker; and this is breaking up some of the old conceptions connected with the marriage relation.

"In this process of change there has developed a certain moral laxity with regard to the purity of woman. A divorce is not under the same stigma here as in Continental Europe, or even in England. It is too often the case that a woman seeks release from her husband in order to mate with another man. In demanding purity of the man, we should not in any way slacken our emphasis on the absolute obligation of purity in the woman and of the fundamental character of that purity to the maintenance of family life.

"Again, we have tended to emphasize unduly the individual relation, as over against the family and social relation. So you will often hear a plea made, sometimes by very respectable and religious people, that it is better that a man and woman who have lost their love for one another should separate and be united with those whom they really love than to continue to live in unhappiness together—the affinity doctrine, sometimes in a gross and offensive, sometimes in a persuasive and attractive form. All such pleading recognizes the man and the woman only as individuals. It forgets the family which exists, or should exist, and to which they have an obligation."

URGES CHURCHMEN TO VOTE.

One Way to Help Save the City from Graft, Says Dr. Caughey.

In his sermon yesterday morning the Rev. Dr. J. Lyon Caughey, pastor of the Harlem Presbyterian Church, spoke on "How Can We Help to Save the City?"

"The city needs to be saved from its political corruption," he said. "This corruption is well known. It has been stated that New York is the worst governed city in the world. If this is the worst city in some ways, in many ways it is the very best on earth. No other city is doing so much for the people in the way of recreation piers and parks, of hospitals and other institutions for the benefit of the poor. But deep political corruption prevails. There is misuse of public property. The Treasury is looted and robbed in an indirect if not in a direct way."

Answering the argument that "the pulpit is no place to discuss politics," Dr. Caughey said that questions of education, of public health, and moral conditions are not political but moral questions. "Infant mortality in the tenements," he said, "is so appalling that it almost amounts to murder to allow it to go on without taking such steps as lie in our power to stop it." He then concluded:

"In the midst of the campaign, now recognized as one of the most important crises the city has ever traversed, since the men now elected will have the expenditure of millions of dollars, it behooves good citizens to elect men not for their political complexion, but those who will make for godliness and right, so that the next administration will be the best that has ever been known in this city and the Government will no longer be a joke and a by-word."

MME. NORIA ARRIVES IN STRIKING COSTUME

New Soprano for Metropolitan Wears Suit Bagged at Knees and Tight at Ankles.

GATTI-CASAZZA TO WED

Will Marry Frances Alda This Fall—Christine Heliane, Lord Minto's Niece, to Sing Soubrette Roles.

The St. Louis yesterday morning brought in many persons connected with the Metropolitan Opera House, including Signor Gatti-Casazza, the General Manager; Mr. Centanini, Mr. Toscanini, and Mme. Jane Noria, one of the new sopranos.

Signor Gatti-Casazza was surrounded by reporters, who asked him if he were going to marry Frances Alda, who is one of the leading sopranos at the Metropolitan. The impresario has been asked this question many times before and has given a negative answer, but yesterday he admitted that it was true.

"I am engaged to Mme. Alda," he said, "and I shall marry her some time this Fall."

Mme. Alda is sailing on the Kronprinz Wilhelm, and will arrive some time later this month.

Mme. Noria wore the most extraordinary suit which has yet been brought over this year, and shows which way the Parisian fashions are blowing. It is a very tight-fitting chiffon velvet, which bags at the knees and is very tight around the ankles. In fact, it is impossible for Mme Noria to take very long steps while she wears this gown. It is trimmed only with round Spanish buttons, also of black. To top it off, she wore a smart turban of white fox, and carried a white fox muff and stole. Mme. Noria's appearance on the dock was almost a sensation..

At the dock the party separated and went to their various hotels. Later in the day Signor Gatti-Casazza held a conference with Mr. Dippel at the Opera House, and in the afternoon he saw a reporter for THE NEW YORK TIMES.

"I wish especially," he said, "to deny the absurd reports which have been published about an interview which I gave to a newspaper man in Italy. In the American papers I have been made to say that the Italian forces have triumphed over the German forces at the Metropolitan. This story was purely fiction.

"Toward the end of this week I hope to have a statement to make about a new and very important engagement. Our latest acquisitions include Mlle. Hidalgo, a young Spanish coloratura soprano. She is only 17, and, being under age, the Spanish Consul in Paris had to sign her contract with the Metropolitan. She sang in 'Il Barbiere di Siviglia' at Monte Carlo last season, and Gunsbourg wanted her back this year, but she will be heard in only four performances there before she comes here in February.

"She is small and very pretty, a dark Spanish type, and has a charming voice. She will be heard in 'Barbiere,' 'Don Pasquale,' and other operas of that sort.

"Christine Heliane, a young English girl, has just been engaged for soubrette rôles in light opera. She is a niece of Lord Minto, the Viceroy of India. Her father is an officer in the East Indian service.

"We have spent a good deal of the Summer looking for suitable ballet girls, in an attempt to improve the ballet. We have decided that the only thing possible to do is to establish a school such as is in vogue in other big Opera Houses. Of course, there is danger in America of young and pretty girls being snatched up for light opera. However, in European Opera Houses they have a very good regulation to prevent that. Each girl is given half her salary, and the remainder is put in the bank to her credit, and is paid her at the end of five years. We may try a system of that sort."

When asked which of the novelties for the coming season he preferred, Mr. Gatti-Casazza said that he had no favorites. The public, he said, must be the judge of the new works.

"'La Habanera,'" he said, "is very interesting, and has much character. I believe the New Theatre will be better suited to it than the Opéra Comique in Paris. Laparra, the composer, will probably visit this country for the first performance.

"'Orfeo' is not new of course, but its revival will be wonderful. It will be sung in Italian. The scenery is painted by the man who made the misen scene for the recent revival at the Opéra Comique, but it is not a copy of that, but remade to suit the Metropolitan stage."

"How is Mr. Caruso's voice?"

"Mr. Caruso, I believe, never was in better voice than he is now. The manager of his tour of the English provinces had to augment the prices and double the list of concerts to satisfy the public.

"'Germania' is a new Italian opera, with a German subject, which I am sure will make an appeal. The final scene shows the battle of Leipsic. It will be sung by Mmes. Gadski or Destinn and Messrs. Caruso and Amato."

"Do you think that opera in English will be a possibility here?"

"I heard Slezak in London in 'Otello.' Besides he sang for me at La Scala in 'Tannhäuser' some years ago. I think there will be no doubt about his success here."

Mr. Gatti-Casazza has now learned to speak some English.

Mme. Noria, who will sing at the Metropolitan for the first time this season, is an American girl. Her real name is Josephine Ludwig, and she hails from St. Louis. She made her original appearance with one of Savage's companies, and then went to Paris, where she was engaged to sing at the Opéra such parts as Elizabeth, Elsa, and Nedda. It was Gailhard, the late Director of the Opéra, who gave her her present name. Later she sang in this country again with the San Carlo Opera Company, adding to her repertoire, among other parts, Carmen and Aïda.

In her apartment at the Knickerbocker Mme. Noria told about her plans for the coming season:

"I am to sing in Lehar's new operetta," she said, "which is to be produced here at the New Theatre for the first time on any stage. It is now being translated into French by Willy, and it will be sung in that language. As the translation is not entirely complete it will not be given until January probably. The music is wonderful. The name of the opera is 'Gypsy Love,' and it is full of Hungarian melodies. There is a waltz which is much more striking and delicious than that in 'The Merry Widow.'

"The plot is curious, and concerns a Princess, who is betrothed to a nobleman, but who wishes to marry a gypsy. A sleeping potion is given to her, and the entire play deals with her dream of what would happen if she runs away with her gypsy lover. Of course when she awakens from her unhappy dream she marries the nobleman.

"I am also to sing in 'La Habanera' and 'L'Attaque du Moulin.' I shall make my first appearance in about two weeks in Baltimore as Venus, a part which I have never sung, although Elizabeth has been in my répertoire for some time. Mr. Dippel has asked me to rehearse 'Lohengrin' and 'Werther,' too."

Mme. Noria had wonderful trunks full of French hats and dresses, which are quite as odd in their ways as the one she wore. One of her hats will not go through an ordinary door. As for her Venus costume, it is likely to shock the Mayor of Baltimore when it bursts on his vision.

GEORGE HAMLIN'S RECITAL.

Artistic Singing of Interesting Songs in Carnegie Hall.

George Hamlin, tenor, gave a song recital yesterday afternoon in Carnegie Hall, which was heard by a numerous and most friendly disposed audience. There is always much pleasure to be got from this singer's recitals, for he is endowed with truly musical gifts beyond the narrower limits; with artistic intelligence; with a zeal that takes him outside the beaten tracks, and, finally—and it really is of some consequence—a voice.

Mr. Hamlin's voice is not a great one, but he has made much of it, and made it an admirable servant of his artistic purposes. He sang well yesterday. His voice had beauty of quality, power of brilliancy, and among the means of interpretation which he commanded there was not lacking variety in color and dramatic expressiveness. To these he adds a fine feeling for the phrase and the symmetrical outline, and a diction that is generally well cared for. Mr. Hamlin's style is manly and robust, even when he is immersed in a mood of tenderness and poesy.

He was not wholly true to the pitch in his first songs in the old style, by Bononcini and Handel, but he was not much troubled in this way thereafter. He can sing these songs with much of the breadth and sustained power that they need. His choice of modern songs was interesting. Thus, of Schubert there were the fine "Musensohn," "Der Wanderer an den Mond," and that exquisite exhalation of lyrical tenderness, "Dass Sie hier gewesen," which so few other concert singers have ever disinterred from the unconsidered mass of Schubert's works, and that so admirably repays one who can sing it. Of Schumann there was the chivalrous "Provençalisches Lied," (from the ballade, "Des Sänger's Fluch.")

Of the two songs by Liszt, "Jugendglück" has more of musical substance than many of his works in this form. Hugo Wolf's ecstatic "Er ist's" Mr. Hamlin had to repeat. He had on his programme four songs by Roger Quilter, Shakespearean and other Elizabethan verses, well written and melodious compositions, though not always going far beneath the surface of things, and of these he had to repeat "Weep You No More." A song by Walter Rummel, "June," showed a true lyrical gift. Songs by Campbell-Tipton, Elgar, Schneider, and Busch made up the rest of the programme.

EDNA HOPPER BREAKS DOWN.

Makes Impromptu Appearance in London and Is Coldly Received.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Oct. 17.—Edna Wallace Hopper Brown began a month's engagement at the Palace Theatre last Monday and quit on Thursday. Although indisposition was the cause given, she was at the theatre Friday night without appearing.

She was here on a private visit without songs and stage wardrobe, but consented, under pressure of the management, to take the engagement. The consequence was that her efforts were received coldly and resulted in a nervous breakdown.

STAGE AIDS THE CHURCH.

Pastor Says It Does in the Week What the Pulpit Attempts on Sunday.

A service for the Actors' Church Alliance was held last night in St. Chrysostom's Church, at Seventh Avenue and Thirty-ninth Street, and the Rev. Sydney Neville Ussher, assistant rector of St. Bartholomew's Church, preached. The audience was small, and few of them were actors.

Mr. Ussher said that the Church should recognize in the stage a handmaiden striving to do six days in the week some of the same kind of work which the pulpit tries to do on Sunday. He said that the stage, coming back to its earlier mission, was teaching more and more nowadays the same truths that the Church is teaching. He referred, though not by name, to "The Melting Pot," "The Servant in the House," and "The Passing of the Third Floor Back."

SIDIS COULD READ AT TWO YEARS OLD

Youngest Harvard Undergraduate Under Father's Scientific Forcing Process Almost from Birth.

GOOD TYPEWRITER AT FOUR

At 5 Composed Text Book on Anatomy, in Grammar School at 6, Then Studied German, French, Latin, and Russian.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Mass., Oct. 17.—Further details of the achievements of William James Sidis, the 11-year-old prodigy who has just entered Harvard with the highest honors are published here to-day, and go to show that the youth who is gravely declared to be the most learned undergraduate that has ever entered the Cambridge institution, is a wonderfully successful result of a scientific forcing experiment, and as such furnishes one of the most interesting mental phenomena in history. His precocity is the fruit of a parental theory of mind growth put into practice from the very beginning of his life.

Young Sidis is the son of Dr. Boris Sidis, a Boston psychologist, who years before the boy's birth had developed very advanced ideas on the subject of child training. On the basis that as soon as a child begins to grow its brain begins to grow also, and that the brain is less and less sensitive to training as age increases. Dr. Sidis had planned and developed an elaborate system of training. This system he applied to his son.

The child's training was begun with a set of alphabetical blocks when he was a little over a year old. When his young son, sitting on the nursery floor, said "ba ba," Dr. Siddis took two of these blocks, denoting A and B respectively, held them before his eyes, and showed him first, the "B" block and then the "A" block.

Later Dr. Sidis reversed this order and showed him the other sound that was represented by these two letters. In a little while, on being shown, first, the "A" block and then the "B" block, the child would say "Ab." Thus, not yet 2 years old, he learned to talk, read, and spell all at once.

Before he was 2½ years old precocious William James would sit on the floor in the midst of his blocks and spell out various words. This was his way of playing. The child was next taught to count. Then, because he wanted the child to know something about the idea of time, Dr. Sidis gave him some calendars, explaining to him the meaning of them. For weeks he played with these.

One day he startled his parents by announcing that he was able to tell on what day of the week any given date would fall. It was first thought that in his play with the calendars he had memcrized some of the dates. Upon investigation, however, it was found that he had worked out all by himself a method of counting enabling him mentally to calculate any date demanded of him.

When William James, (or "Jimmy") was 3½ years old he could use a typewriter, and at 4 he was an expert operator. He was also much interested in fairy stories, learned them by heart, and was soon studying elocution and learning how to recite them to the best advantage.

By the time he was 5 years old he was not only able to read, write, and speak English and to use a typewriter, but he was an expert accountant, had begun to study French and Latin, and had written a text book on anatomy and another on English grammar—presumably for his own use.

Entering a grammar school when 6 years old, he moved up several grades in six months, and entered Brookline High School at 8 years. In six weeks there he had completed the mathematical course and begun writing a book on astronomy. Then he plunged into the study of German, French, Latin, and Russian.

On leaving school he began the study of mathematics in real earnest. Integral and infinitesimal calculus became his hobbies, and in addition he invented a system of logarithms based on the number 12 instead of 10. This was inspected by several well-known mathematicians, and pronounced perfect in every detail.

Much has already been made of the story of the three years spent in endeavoring to secure admission to Harvard, Sidis's age being an obstacle which the university authorities could not see their way clear to override till this year.

When Mr. and Mrs. Ross were married at the Victoria Hotel, New York, in 1905, the bridesmaid was Grace Dennis and the groomsman Chauncey Pollock. Since Mr. Pollock could not be in Toronto for the celebration, Mr. and Mrs. Ross and Miss Dennis decided to come to New York.

Black Opal will be scarce in 1910

The miners of black opal fear that the year 1910 will show a great decrease in the output of the famous Lightning Ridge Mine. The last of this year's mining is now in our hands and some marvelous specimens are coming from the cutters. Large and small pieces alike reveal the flames and flashes of color that have made this stone the most sought after of any gem we have ever offered to the public.

DRIVERS TRY OUT VANDERBILT COURSE

Long Island Parkway Thrown Open to Entrants for Preliminary Practice for Cup Race.

OUTSIDERS TO BE BARRED

Bowers, Driver of Rainier Car in 24-Hour Race, Likely to Recover—Contest Promoters Lose Money.

The Vanderbilt Cup course on Long Island was thrown open this morning for preliminary practice for the race, which is scheduled for Saturday, October 30. Drivers with their racing cars will be seen on the track daily between the hours of 5 a. m. and 8 a. m. No practice, however, will be permitted Sunday.

In order to prevent outsiders from using the track a special agreement has been entered into between the Motor Cups Holding Company and the Supervisors of Nassau County, whereby no cars or drivers except those actually entered in the race can participate in this preliminary practice, and in order to prevent any infraction of the Supervisors' rules Manager Pardington has prepared a specially numbered plate which will be hung on the radiator of each entrant's car, and none of these numbers will be issued except to bona fide entrants who have paid their entrance fees.

In order that the spectators may identify the cars and drivers, Manager Pardington has arranged that the cars in classes 1 and 2, entered for the Vanderbilt Cup race, will carry numbers 1 to 29; in class 3, for the Wheatley Hill Sweepstakes, the cars will be numbered from 30 to 39, while in class 4, for the Massapequa Sweepstakes, the cars will be numbered from 40 to 49. This same system of numbering will be employed in the actual race, but, of course, the cars will probably draw different numbers from those used in practice.

Several additional entries have been made for the race during the past forty-eight hours. The latest entrants are an Alco, six-cylinder car, entered by the American Locomotive Company, which will be driven by H. F. Grant, who made such a splendid showing at Lowell. There is also an Apperson, which will be piloted by Hugh Harding, who finished third in the Fairmount Park race, together with a Marion, which will make its Eastern début in racing under the guidance of George L. Reiss, and a Moon car, with Philip Wells as driver.

Charles Bowers, the driver of the Rainier car in the twenty-four-hour race at the Brighton Beach Motordrome, whose skull was fractured when his car turned turtle, is resting quietly at the Kings County Hospital. The operation was entirely successful and Bowers has recovered consciousness. The physicians, however, have barred all visitors, and last night said he would probably recover. When Bowers was taken to the emergency hospital on the grounds after the accident the surgeon bandaged him up and reported that the injured driver was not seriously hurt, and it was not until Bowers was removed to the Kings County Hospital that it was found he was suffering from a fractured skull.

Vanderbilt Captures Two Stakes.

PARIS, Oct. 17.—W. K. Vanderbilt captured two stakes at the Bois du Boulogne course today. His Maroaurele won the Prix des Champs Elysees, a selling event at five and a half furlongs, while his Silver Streak finished first for the Prix du Cedre, a stake of $4,000 for three-year-olds at eleven furlongs. Mason Carnes's El Blar was unplaced in the Prix de la Faisanderie, at a mile and a half.

NAVAL CADET PARALYZED.

Earl Wilson Sustains Serious Injuries in Game with Villanova.

Special to The New York Times.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Oct. 17.—The injury to Earl D. Wilson, the Naval Academy quarter back, sustained in yesterday's game against Villanova, has proved to be more serious than at first thought, Wilson having sustained a twisted neck resulting in paralysis of the motor and sensory nerves of the limbs and the upper part of the body. His speech and brain are not affected. The medical officers believe that Wilson is not dangerously hurt, and that the paralysis will wear off. There is no doubt that he is out of the game for the remainder of the season.

As complete an external examination as is possible to make has been made, and no fracture or pressure upon the spinal column has been indicated. An examination by X-ray was discussed, but it was decided that Wilson's improvement would be favored if he was disturbed as little as possible. This evening it was stated that there has been a slight improvement in Wilson's condition. Wilson is unquestionably the best all-around athlete at the Naval Academy. He is a member of the baseball, basket ball, and gymnasium teams, besides the football eleven, and a point winner in boxing and wrestling.

Berna Takes Four-Mile Run.

The feature event of the games of St. Mary's Temperance Athletic Club of Bayonne, N. J., yesterday, at Star Baseball Park, Elizabethport, N. J., was the four-mile handicap, in which Berna of the Irish-American Club, starting from the twenty-five-yard mark, waded through the entire field and finally romped home the victor by eighty yards, with J. Kramer, Acorn A. C., (scratch,) second.

The half-mile run was a very close race, J. McCloskey, South Paterson, A. C., winning by three yards, with G. Lane and E. Frick close behind. A. Hax won the 300-yard handicap.

Soccer Teams in Close Games.

The Cameron football team met defeat at the hands of the Hollywood Inn eleven by the score of 5 goals to 1 at Van Cortlandt Park yesterday. The team from Yonkers started off like winners, and scored three goals in rapid succession, Salmond, Gibbs, and Hunn each scoring one point, while the Cameron players failed to tally. In the second half the Cameron players by good combination work scored a goal, but the Yonkers players came right back and scored twice, Gibbs and Stewart each being credited with one.

The Brooklyn football team played the Paterson Rangers yesterday at Paterson, and distinguished themselves by playing a draw game each team scoring three goals. The visitors surprised the home team by the fast game they put up, and the good work of their defense.

In an Inter-State League game at Taft Oval yesterday the Donegal Celtics and the Brooklyn Hibernians played a tie game, each team scoring two goals. The Donegal players started off like winners and were the first to score, McNamara getting the credit of the goal, but they did not stay in the lead long, for O'Connor shot a goal for the Hibernians.

The Columbia Oval football eleven defeated the Astoria Independents by the score of 3 goals to 0 at Astoria yesterday. The visitors put up a fast game, and had the defense of the home team working hard to keep down the score.

DALY WINS LONG RUN.

Irish-American Crack Captures Feature Event at Irish Games.

John J. Daly, Irish-American A. C., starting from scratch yesterday, won the three-mile run, the feature event of the athletic carnival of the Fourth Regiment Irish Volunteers of New Jersey at West Side Park, Jersey City. Daly conceded liberal handicaps to J. F. Crowley, G. Critchley, and other long-distance cracks, but overcame the long leads in the first two miles, and then came away and won by a good margin.

Matt Geis, unattached, captured the mile run from the thirty-five-yard mark, covering the distance in 4.29 2-5. Martin J. Sheridan, Irish-American A. C., and Robert Edgren, New York A. C., divided the discus events, the former winning the scratch event and the latter the handicap. John J. Flanagan of the Irish-Americans accounted for the hammer throw with a heave of 175 yards 5½ inches. The summaries:

100-Yard Dash, Handicap.—Won by W. Boschen, Acorn A. A., (6 yards;) T. Healy, Dominican Lyceum, (9 yards,) second; R. Robertson, Pastime A. C., (9 yards,) third. Time—0:10.

JEFFRIES NOT IMPRESSED.

Heavyweight Pugilist Says Johnson's Victory Will Not Change Plans.

QUEENSTOWN, Oct. 17.—When James J. Jeffries, the American heavyweight pugilist, who is a passenger on the steamer Lusitania, bound for New York, after a period of training in a suburb of Paris, heard of Jack Johnson's victory over Stanley Ketchel at San Francisco he said that this in no wise would affect his plans. Ketchel, he added, was only a middleweight, and not by any means the best of the middleweights.

"Ketchel," continued Jeffries, "is trying to feed himself up to make the heavyweight class, but it will only weaken him. Johnson isn't much of a fighter, and he never met a good man. His fight with Burns was no test. Burns is a newspaper fighter.

"I can only hope," Jeffries went on, "that Johnson will cover my money. I wouldn't fight him if I didn't think I could beat him."

One of Jeffries's friends who is traveling with him remarked that the fight between Jeffries and Johnson would be a joke. Jeffries now weighs 230 pounds, and he says he will fight at 210 or 212 pounds.

Fight Receipts About $25,000.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Oct. 17.—A conservative estimate places the receipts of the Johnson-Ketchel fight yesterday at $25,000, of which the fighters received $15,000. Of this amount Johnson received $9,000 and Ketchel $6,000.

Saginaws Beat the Lakewoods.

The Saginaw Athletic Club football team defeated the Lakewood Athletic Club eleven yesterday by the score of 5 to 0 at 167th Street and Jerome Avenue. M. Moses made a touchdown, the only score of the game.

ST. YVES IN FORM AGAIN.

French Runner Wins Guggenheim Marathon at Seattle.

Special to The New York Times.

SEATTLE, Wash., Oct. 17.—Henri St. Yves, in the Guggenheim Marathon race here this afternoon, clearly demonstrated his right to the title of world's champion Marathon runner by defeating a field of twelve runners, which included Johnny Hayes, Johnny Marsh, the Canadian crack, and Harry McLean, the Arizona Indian phenom, smashing his own record made in New York last April to 2 hours and 32 minutes and 39 1-5 seconds.

When it was announced that a new world's record had been made, the immense throng went wild with excitement, and, rushing on to the ball park, swarmed over the track, interfering with the other runners. Marsh was second and Hayes third.

Mrs. M. Robert Guggenheim, wife of the young New York millionaire, sponsor of the race, crowned the winner from her box.

HORSE SHOW ENTRY LIST A RECORD ONE

All the Prominent Stables in the East Will Show at the Garden Week of Nov. 8.

INTERNATIONAL CHAMPIONS

A. G. and R. C. Vanderbilt, C. W. Watson, C. H. Mackay, J. C. Thompson, and J. W. Harriman Exhibitors.

Tabulating the hundreds of nominations received in the first mails after Saturday—the closing day for entries—kept the office staff of the National Horse Show Association busy all of yesterday. The work will not be finished until all letters postmarked with the closing date are at hand from distant points, but those listed prove that the number is to be a record breaker. Among harness horse exhibitors who will show from high-stepping ponies to four-in-hands, inclusive of each type of single horses and pairs, are Alfred G. Vanderbilt of Oakland Farm, who will be represented in forty-five classes. One pair will be his most recent importation from England, Queen's Favor and Queen's Maid, with the four famous Mel Valley ponies.

There is also an entry in many classes from J. W. Harriman's Avondale Farm, the list being headed by Nala, winner of the championship last week at the Louisville show, and which won the Forest King Challenge Cup in Madison Square Garden last year and the year before. A win this year will give to Mr. Harriman the permanent possession of the trophy. Also in his string is Lady Dilham, which has two wins scored for the English Hackney Challenge Cup, and is eligible to win it out. R. P. McGrann of Lancaster, Penn., has entries in forty classes, including the well-known Dilham Prime Minister, Young Mountaineer, and some importations that were winners at the International Show in London. Four hackneys, both in single and double harness, are nominated by Clarence H. Mackay, all winners last week at Piping Rock—Land o' Burns, Irish Lass, Ben-Hur, and Quo Vadis.

Another of the great show winners here and abroad, the stable of C. W. Watson of Baltimore, will have entries in all the harness classes. William H. Moore will exhibit in thirty-five classes. The showing is unique in that it will comprise the harness horse champion of the 1908 and this year's International Show in England, Radiant and Loudwater Flourish. Another importation of marvelous beauty and action is his mare Lady Seaton. R. C. Vanderbilt enters Doctor Selwonk and his other noted horses in fifteen classes.

Women whose faces are familiar on the bridle paths of Central Park predominate in the early entries of saddle horses. John A. Logan, 3d, of Oriole Farm, Ohio, is also for the first time an exhibitor of saddle horses, and Spencer Borden of Fall River has also a large entry. Other exhibitors are Mrs. Henry M. Alexander, Miss Alexander, R. E. Davis of Boston, Mrs. D. W. Evans, Miss Eleanore Guggenheim, Miss Grace Antony, Miss M. S. Whitney, Mrs. L. Tallmadge, Shawrdown; B. G. Gunther, Torne Brook Farm, Ramapo, N. Y.; George Wallen, E. Lincoln Stadler, and the Sequatogue Farm of Babylon, L. I.

Exhibitors of road teams besides Messrs. Vanderbilt and Moore, are E. Van der Horst Koch, J. Campbell Thompson, and Morris Howlett, the latter being entered for the road race from the Arrow Head Inn. The new class for Morgan horses has filled well, and includes entries from Jay F. Carlisle and J. B. Perkins, Cleveland, Ohio. In the hackney breeding classes nominators are William Du Pont, Montpelier, Va.; Henry Fairfax, Aldie, Va., Belthorpe Farms, Jet, Ky., and P. G. H. Bennett of Boston, Mass., who will show the imported stallion Lord Kimberley. A new exhibitor of Shetland ponies is C. E. Bunn, with twenty entries from Peoria, Ill.

In the classes for military officers, including those over the jumps, the entries include Lieut. Frank B. Barrett of the Field Artillery, N. G., N. Y.; Alvin W. Perry of Squadron A, St. John's School, Manlius, N. Y., and the following from the regular army: Lieut. Col. George M. Dunn, Washington, D. C.; Lieut. Herbert D. Walter, Army and Navy Club, New York; Lieut. Eben Swift, Eleventh Cavalry; Lieut. Gordon Johnston, Eleventh Cavalry; Lieut. George M. Lee, Seventh Cavalry; Lieut. J. S. Martin, Fourteenth Cavalry; Lieut. J. C. Montgomery, Seventh Cavalry, the latter five being stationed at Fort Riley, Kansas. An entry by cable has also been received for this class from British officers.

MASKETTE AND FITZ HERBERT.

Keene's Filly Trains On, Waiting Meeting with Hildreth's Colt.

The best promise of the racing left for the season of 1909 is in the meeting of the champion three-year-olds, James R. Keene's filly Maskette and S. C. Hildreth's colt Fitz Herbert, which only mischance or Hildreth's refusal to run will prevent. No declaration of a special purpose has been made by the Keene stable, but Maskette is making a later campaign than any of the famous horses of the stable have ever made, and is training on steadily at Sheepshead Bay for the late stakes that she recently has been engaged in. The promise of her meeting with Fitz Herbert comes in the fact that her engagements are in the most valuable races left of the season, both handicaps in which Fitz Herbert also is entered. In both cases the distance suits both horses, one race being at a mile and a sixteenth and the other at a mile and a furlong. There no longer is any prospect of a special race for the two being made, for with two chances for them to come together in stakes as valuable as the average of the season the champions will meet unless the Hildreth stable keeps out of the way.

Entries for the races of the United Hunts Association, to be held at Belmont Park terminal Nov. 2 and 6, will close to-day. The programme has been arranged to make special appeal to amateur jockeys, and only two races in the two days' programme are open to professional riders. Each day's programme consists of three steeplechases, one hurdle race, one race for galloways, and one for hacks and hunters on the flat. Plate or a cup is added to each event in addition to a purse.

COAST MARIE AGAIN VICTOR.

Takes Three Straight Heats from Claro in Speedway Brushes.

Amateur road drivers on the Speedway Drive yesterday were out in full force, and a number of interesting and close brushes aroused the enthusiasm of a large gathering of spectators who crowded along both sides of the drive near the finishing post. The standing rivalry between Coast Marie, 2:11¼, driven by James A. Murphy, and Joseph F. Gibbons's brown gelding Claro, 2:11½, offered three brushes, which were the best of the morning. Coast Marie took all of the heats, the first and last being won rather easily, but the second furnished a close race in which Coast Marie just managed to nose out Claro at the finish.

Kitty Wilkes and Minstrel Wilkes, the first driven by William Scott and the second by Fred Bossert, had a nip and tuck heat, which was one of the liveliest offered. The two came down close together, and just before the finish were practically even, but Kitty Wilkes managed to get her nose to the front as the line was passed. Another heat of the same sort came between Judge Boardman, driven by Harry L. Toplitz and M. S. Reynolds's Trixy H., the former getting the decision by a scant margin. Trixy H. previously had tried issue with William McMillen, Jr.'s, Beaucatcher, and took a well-earned victory.

Dandy C. O., with J. J. Corkery in the wagon, and T. McGaffney's Sadie Mac had a lively session in two heats. The first was won by Sadie Mac, but in the second Dandy C. O. came strong, and had the best of it to the finish by half a length. Dandy C. O. later came down with Lilly Wilkes as an opponent, and scored an easy victory.

Lilly Wilkes in the first heat of the morning took the measure of L. N. Hartog's Katie Gay, and was beaten out a short time later by T. McGaffney's Sadie Mac, who had failed to meet Dandy C. O. in the deciding heat between the two.

Lady Worthy, the show horse, driven by Max Oettinger, pulled out a neat victory over Rose Electrite, 2:15¼, driven by E. Botenus. In a previous race Rose Electrite held up her reputation by defeating M. S. Reynolds's Trixy H. in easy fashion.

FORAN FIRST IN BIG RUN.

Gencoe A. C. Holds Largest Cross-Country Event of Season.

The largest field that has started in a cross-country event this season competed yesterday in the invitation run of the Glencoe Athletic Club, 126th Street and Second Avenue, 101 athletes going away at the crack of the gun. Of this number 86 finished the full distance. Frank Foran of the Mott Haven Athletic Club captured first place in the event in easy fashion. He went to the lead shortly after the start, and from then to the finish was never headed, gradually increasing his lead all the way and coming in nearly a minute before any of his rivals. F. Smith of the Mohawk Athletic Club was second, a short distance ahead of W. Beck of Holy Cross Lyceum. The winner's time was 18:22.

Kramer's Double Defeat.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWARK, N. J., Oct. 17.—Frank Kramer, the cycle champion, was beaten twice to-day at the Newark Velodrome, once in a team race with Willie Fenn as a partner, Jackie Clarke and Floyd MacFarland, his manager, doing the trick, and again in the three-mile open professional race, when Clarke and Iver Lawson both beat him. It was a good day for the Australians, as Paddie Hehir captured the two-mile professional handicap from the forty-yard mark.

Centurians in Road Run.

Seventy-five riders took part yesterday in the thirteenth annual Fall century run of the Century Road Club of America over the Merrick Road, on Long Island. The run was in charge of Charles Hausenbaur, and was in two divisions, a slow and a fast, the latter being composed of the fast riders of the club. The slow division was the first to get away. About forty riders left about 8 oclock. The fast division left with thirty-five riders about one hour later. Practically all the riders finished on time, but complained about the hard ride against the wind. The fast division was to average about sixteen miles an hour on the way out, but they hit it up to about twenty-five miles per hour.

HOW THE BIG TEAMS SHAPE UP SO FAR

Speculation on the Important Games That Have Been Played.

LITTLE FEAR FOR THE BLUE

Yale Showed Real Form in Saturday's Game with West Point—What's the Matter with Princeton?

The usual flood of hard luck stories that emanates every football season from New Haven did not fail to materialize this year. So regular and stereotyped have been these rumors in the past and so empty of all true meaning on the days when Princeton and Harvard were encountered that they have long since been classed with the "Wolf, wolf" fable of nursery days, and those who follow football place but little credence in them. The inauguration of Yale's current pigskin season was not marred by the absence of these stories, however, and so Yale graduates and the general public, who were not in on the general scheme of things Yalensian, were inclined to view the Yale-West Point game of last Saturday with some alarm, lest the soldiers repeat their feats of former years and send the Blue eleven back to New Haven at the short end of the score.

But if ever fears were groundless, if ever there was no reason to worry early in the season about the future of an eleven, these erstwhile believers in calamity howls must now be satisfied. For Yale saw the Army, met the Army, and conquered the Army with such ridiculous ease as to still all doubt. Not that the Army did not play cracking good football, particularly in view of the very short time for practice at the disposal of the cadets and the numerical insufficiency of the corps to supply a goodly number of candidates. It is simply the case that this year Yale is further along in her development than she has been at a corresponding time for many seasons. And, too, Yale has a regular eleven and a squad of substitutes of extraordinarily high calibre. Also, and this is almost the most important of all, these men have evidently been grounded, drilled, and thoroughly hammered into homogeneity and team work by as brilliant coaching as team ever got.

Last Saturday's game must have impressed some things very deeply on Harvard and Princeton minds. In the past the elevens of these two universities have come through a fairly hard season with clean scores, and lots of confidence, only to fall victims to the bulldog in a second half that was so dissimilar to the first as to make one believe it was not a part of the same game.

If Yale or the Army has anything up its respective sleeve neither showed it. Both clung tenaciously to old football except for quarterback runs from a kick formation. The Army, of the two, played a more modern game, in that the forward pass was more frequently if unsuccessfully tried by them. Yale's two attempts at the forward pass were both successful in their ultimate object—touchdowns. And the former of these, a forty-yard heave from Coy to Vaughan, was as pretty a play as has been seen for many a day. This one fact alone would indicate that Yale is prepared to use the forward pass to the full this season, and woe to the team to meet the Blue eleven that has not prepared a strong defense to this powerful play. Taken by and large, Yale has undoubtedly struck a gait equalled by no other college thus far this season.

Harvard has not as yet advanced much beyond preparatory stages, if her games with Williams and Maine are a criterion. Power and ability there certainly are in the husky wearers of the Crimson, but they have failed to show either so far, whether by advice of coaches or because of inability it is difficult to say.

There is something so totally wrong in Princeton, so much at variance with preconceived ideas of what a Princeton eleven should be capable of, that it seems certain that Alumi of the Orange and the Black will not be as quiescent on Nov. 14, the day after the Yale game, as they are now. It was all well enough for Princeton to plod along under a new system last year and give up a defeat for experience. But when Villanova and Fordham, neither of them in even the second class as compared to Princeton's football strength, can force ties and goal-from-the-field victories down the Tiger's throat, it is not by any means for the same reason that Harvard was satisfied with her game against Williams. For apparently there is no power, cohesion, ability, or fight in the Orange and Black eleven of 1909.

Were there any fraternities at Princeton, those opposed to these secret societies might place their criticism of these institutions at the door of Princeton football weakness. Certainly no weaker team has ever practiced in the New Jersey town for four weeks with so lamentable results. The backs go into the line alone, helped by no one but themselves, nor do they take their openings with either precision or intuitiveness. The line men charge so slowly that often the holes are not there, and, were it not for the good right toe of Cunningham Princeton would not have a man of real scoring ability on her team.

That is the situation as it is. Princeton has, to a very considerable extent, the habit of unpleasantly upsetting hostile theories as to her real ability, and possibly she is playing 'possum now. Maybe that is why the forward pass and the onside kick have no intimacy with Osborne Field. But worst of all is the fact that players are openly criticising coaches, and coaches answering back in a helpless sort of way, permitting insubordination at the same time that they deprecate it. An eleven that fights its coaches is foredoomed to defeat.

Western and Southern football is just about the same as it was last year. There is still an adherence to straight, old-fashioned football, rough work, and big, slow men. Sewanee, rated as among the best west of the Appalachians, was a dismal failure last Saturday. Michigan is having her hands full with teams that used to go down to defeat by a hundred points a few years ago, and which have now adopted at least a semblance of open play and forward passes. Minnesota and Nebraska indulge in slugging matches and call it football, while Wisconsin is too busy with her baseball team in Japan to do much on the gridiron.

Certainly the season of 1909, or as much of it as we have seen, has produced nothing particularly brilliant except in the way of failures. Only Yale and Harvard seem to have reached anything like the stages which this advanced date would seem to demand.

Fordham Primed for Swarthmore.

New York will get its first glimpse of the fast Fordham football team next Saturday, when it lines up against the Swarthmore eleven at American League Park. The Maroon players have shown a surprising article of football in the games played thus far, and little difficulty is anticipated in disposing of the Quaker contingent. The victory of Fordham over Cornell at Ithaca on Saturday by a score of 12 to 6 gave proof of the strong playing ability of the New Yorkers, and served to show that the holding of Princeton to a 3-to-0 score the previous Saturday was not in the nature of a fluke. It is a case which occurs every year where one of the smaller teams plays in close to championship form, and gets victories over the so-called big elevens.

In the game with Cornell, Fordham showed a complete grasp of the new football, open and fast play signalizing almost every attempt to carry the ball. It was the speed of the Maroons' well-developed attack that did more than anything else to complete the defeat of the Ithacans. Besides this, the punting of Walsh was phenomenal, his kicks averaging close to fifty yards, and the work of the McCaffery brothers at the wings in getting down under punts gave nearly the full advantage from them. Fordham students held a big celebration on Saturday in honor of the first victory over one of the Big Six.

No Anxiety at West Point.

Special to The New York Times.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Oct. 17.—Yale's defeat of the Army by the largest score in a number of years has not cast any gloom over the academy or caused any anxiety as to the Army's chanes in the final game with the Navy. The cadets feel that their team put up a good game, but the great difference in Yale's weight simply wore the lighter cadets down in the final period. The Yale game this early was a good thing for the soldiers, for faults were uncovered Saturday that can be corrected now, which later on in the season might be more difficult. Considering the gruelling contest the soldiers came out of the game in excellent shape, with the exception of Dean and Chamberlain. Dean received a severe kick in the head during the game, and for a time last night he was very flighty, but to-day is reported to be doing nicely. Chamberlain again injured his shoulder, and will be out of the game for a week or more. The rest of the team, while a little stiff and sore, are all on duty.

Mohawks Close Outdoor Season

The outdoor season of the Mohawk Athletic Club closed yesterday at Cannon's Westchester Park. J. McDowell and J. Gomez, the contestants for the club point trophy, were unable to decide, as the standard for the high jump in which Gomez was to compete could not be found, and the championship remains undecided.

McDowell led Gomez by a point, and yesterday scored another in the 220-yard dash, making the score 21 to 19. The high jump will be decided Sunday at the clubhouse.

The feature event of the afternoon was the three-mile run, with J. Malone on scratch. F. Joyce, on the 150-yard mark, went out from the start, and kept the lead through the race, with W. Boyle and Joyce following close behind. In the last lap Malone started to sprint, but was unable to overtake Joyce, who finished five yards in the lead.

Records for Sheridan A. C. Athletes.

The dual meet between the Sheridan A. C. and Vigilant A. C., scheduled for yesterday at Macomb's Dam Park, was called off, owing to the latter club failing to put in an appearance. The Sheridan Club held a set of members' games, when two club records were smashed. H. Schechter established new figures for the standing broad jump, and R. Bachman made a new record in the standing broad jump.

THE FINANCIAL SITUATION.

Advances of 1 per cent. in the discounts of the Bank of England and the Bank of Germany and a rise in time money rates here to a 5 per cent. basis for most maturities served to retain for international money markets last week their position of first importance in current discussion of the financial situation. On the Stock Exchange there was a very obvious disposition to take a cheerful view of these money market developments. It was argued that following the attainment by call money of a 6 per cent. rate on the Tuesday of the preceding week there had occurred declines running to as much as 9 points in United States Steel and 7 points or so in Union Pacific, Reading, and others, and that inasmuch as the tendency of the call money market was easier, the 6 per cent. figure itself having found no repetition, this reaction in the stock market had through subsequent reduction in loans fully discounted the immediate situation. The rise in prices which set in upon the resumption of business after the Columbus Day recess was also materially helped by extensive covering of short sales. This was presumably particularly true of the remarkable rise in United States Steel shares. As a whole the market was probably typical of those which will be witnessed from this time on until the usual mid-Winter relaxation in the money market occurs. Traders in securities secure profits only when stocks are active, and it is a matter of considerable indifference to them whether the movement of prices be up or down. They also become accustomed to higher money rates after these have been in effect for a short time, and brokerage house literature toward the close of last week made it apparent that already the influence of 5 per cent. money was wearing away.

It is extremely doubtful, however, if under the conditions disclosed in the foreign money markets last week there could be any pronounced rise in securities prices from prevailing levels without a resultant stringency in the local money market. If the advances in the English and German bank rates were not directly intended to have such an effect it is nevertheless apparent that one of their results must be the curtailment of accommodation to American borrowers. A gold import movement save upon very onerous terms is out of the question. The banks of this country, therefore, face the necessity of meeting the demands for crop-moving purposes and the requirements of a rapidly-expanding trade and of the stock market from their own resources. These resources are, as the figures prove, amply sufficient to care for the first two requirements, but are not adequate to the additional strain which would be imposed by an extensive stock market speculation. There is nothing abnormal in 5 per cent. money at this season of the year in this city, and the same statement could be made of a 6 per cent. rate. As a matter of fact, if quotations around these figures are steadily maintained until the close of the year it will be a matter from which to derive satisfaction rather than disappointment, for the maintenance of such quotations will reflect a demand for money from the business world for purposes of expansion. No particular pride can be taken in a condition of affairs where trade is so dull that 2 per cent. or 3 per cent. money is long maintained. Everything points to a permanently higher level for money so far as its fluctuations are dependent upon business requirements. The absence of killing frosts over the corn territory has made possible the harvesting of a great crop of this cereal, and the railroads are now engaged in bringing to market an almost unprecedented tonnage of all agricultural products. This traffic, together with the mighty stirring of the entire business world which has followed the season's favorable farm returns, is already finding expression, so far as the railroads are concerned, in greater earnings and greater distributions to stockholders. The Norfolk & Western last week increased its semi-annual distribution from 2 per cent. to 2½ per cent., following the example of the Atchison in the previous week, and among miscellaneous companies to take similar steps were the Pacific Coast Company, the Sears-Roebuck Company, and a host of smaller concerns. Bank clearings continue to show large gains over previous years, and among the steel and iron concerns and the great railroad equipment companies production is increasing to a volume which promises soon to dwarf all previous records.

It will be a most unusual outcome of the Fall and Winter money markets if we fail to import gold, and yet there seems to be a strong probability that such will be the case. The Bank of England was undoubtedly prompted in raising its rate last week by the large amounts of gold, amounting to not less than $31,000,000, which it has lost since Sept. 1. In all this period the Bank has been unable to recoup its losses by purchases of South African gold arriving in London, for these have been secured by Germany, Russia, and Austria. The intention of the management of this great institution seems to be to divert, if possible, to the Bank of France the bulk of future gold requirements, and this attitude will make an import movement to this country exceedingly difficult. So far the Bank of France has retained its 3 per cent. discount, but the rate is now out of line with quotations in other European centres, and may not be long maintained. A curtailment of purchases of finance bills, which has been one of the sources counted upon to influence a gold movement in our favor, throws us back upon our exports. Shipments of cotton have been unusually heavy since Sept. 1, and were directly responsible for the September showing of increased domestic exports. The total of such exports exceeded those of September, 1908, by $4,500,000, this marking, with one exception, the first excess of exports over those of similar months last year. If the tide has at last turned and our exports are to exceed imports again, the consequences, so far as the establishment of American credits abroad is concerned, will be of the highest importance.

THE MARKETS OF EUROPE.

PARIS TONE CONFIDENT.

Expectation of Dearer Money in London and Berlin Creates No Alarm.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Oct. 17.—Though advances in money rates in London and Berlin are still expected, the Paris Bourse last week displayed less anxiety than it has previously shown on this subject. The Autumn demands for ready funds are not much greater than they have been in other years and no fear is felt that the Bank of France will be obliged to take measures to defend the reserve, though shipments of gold to Russia, Egypt, and perhaps Africa may yet be necessary.

The only political influences affecting speculation are those due to the situation in Spain. The feebleness of the Spanish funds slightly reflected upon the issues of other Governments, which, however, show a healthful and firm tendency.

Industrial conditions appear excellent, and mining securities are particularly in favor. Rio Tinto alone reacted Saturday to a considerable extent, closing at 1926 against 1939 at the opening.

BANK RATE'S EFFECT GOOD.

Increase to 4 Per Cent. Preferable to Preceding Uncertainty.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Oct. 17.—The feature of the week in the financial world was the rise in the bank rate to 4 per cent., but as it was expected the effect has been, if anything, beneficial. The Stock Exchange does not mind a rate of 4 per cent.; in fact, prefers it to the uncertainty and unsettlement before it was finally fixed. It certainly is not likely to be raised again this year.

The object of the rise was to check the outflow of gold and the borrowing of other countries, particularly America, for speculating purposes. In consequence a period of comparatively dear money will be faced.

The stock markets have borne the rise with remarkable equanimity, renewed activity following and important gains being recorded all around, especially in Americans.

BERLIN MARKET INANIMATE.

Higher Bank Rates Cause Lively Demand for Call Money.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Oct. 17.—The rise in the German and English bank rates was accompanied by a lively demand in all markets for call money, and was a further check to the speculative tendency.

Berlin operations were essentially inanimate, although the bear party manifested itself with considerable courage. The only semblance to buoyancy during the week was caused by the renewed upward movement of United States Steels.

The market closed with slight advances over the previous week end. Bank shares were the feature, owing to the belief that the great houses are rounding out a year of exceptional prosperity.

STEEL MILLS PRESSED FOR RAW MATERIALS

Unprecedented Tonnages Held Back by Shortage of Billets, Bars, and Bessemer.

BREAK DOWN IN MIDDLE

Situation Develops Fact That While Coke and Pig Iron Are Sufficient They Cannot Supply Orders.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, Oct. 16.—The American Bridge Company, with 400,000 tons in unfilled orders for fabricated materials on its books, is unable to put its Ambridge and Pencoyd plants on double turn because of slow deliveries of structural shapes by the Carnegie mills. Of the aggrepate orders for 3,000 cars received by the Pressed Steel Car Company and the Standard Car Company during the week just ended, nearly 1,000 of them had to be turned over to Western plants because of the inability of the steel mills to increase their weekly shipments of plates. gregate orders for 3,000 cars received by the Missouri Pacific, the Norfolk & Western and the Lehigh Valley from the Steel Corporation during the week, only the 53,000 tons specified to the Carnegie mills can be rolled before the holidays, the Steel Corporation admitting that the Gary plant will be occupied with open-hearth rail orders till Feb. 1.

That is the situation in the steel business at the close of the first half of October. The billet, bar, plate, and shape mills have failed to keep pace with the finishing plants, and billets and steel bars cannot be bought, even at premiums, for prompt delivery. The situation explains the haste of the Steel Corporation to enlarge its capacity in semi-finished steel.

The capacity of the country, apparently, has broken down in the middle, for pig iron and coke are still to be had, and the finished product mills continue to take orders, dependent only on the promptness of the rolling mills, while the semi-finished steel makers decline to contract for bars, shapes, and plates at this time for deliveries prior to Jan. 1 at the earliest.

The unprecedented tonnage being turned out at the steel mills is, however, making itself felt in the pig iron trade. Foundry and basic grades of iron are still to be had, but there is a threatened famine in Bessemer, which made a sensational advance last Thursday to $19, Valleys, for immediate deliveries, a clean rise of $1 a ton in seven days.

Bessemer iron was selling at $18 for first quarter of 1910 last Monday, when the Bessemer Furnace Association met in Cleveland and considered a request of the Republic Iron and Steel Company for 20,000 tons for delivery during the first quarter of next year. The furnacemen decided the Republic could have the iron, and the association started out to fill the order. The fact that the association furnaces were signed up for virtually their entire output up to April 1 developed before 5,000 tons of the order had been secured. The 20,000 tons were covered, but only after a vigorous skirmish, and $19, valleys, was the price paid on nearly all of it. Immediately afterward, two Pittsburg steel-making companies came into the market for a total of 12,000 tons of Bessemer, for immediate shipment. They paid the new price of $19, establishing that as the price for prompt Bessemer. It is predicted that by Nov. 1 valley Bessemer iron will have reached the $20 level—which is two months sooner than was thought possible a month ago.

The Steel Corporation went into the open market in the East this week and purchased about 5,000 tons of basic for the Pencoyd works of the American Bridge Company—the first pig iron the Steel Corporation has purchased since the busines resumption. This action is believed to indicate that the Steel Corporation furnaces, even running at topnotch capacity, are failing in the task of keeping up with the steel mills. Despite the sensational market in basic iron in the East during the week, the price for that grade in Pittsburg held firmly at $17, valleys, for immediate deliveries, and $17.50 for first quarter and half. Sales of No. 2 foundry were reported at $17.25 for prompt, though some furnaces are asking $17.50. Some sales of the No. 2 grade were made for delivery beginning in November and running through the first half of next year at $17.75, valleys, which is $18.65 delivered Pittsburg.

The Carnegie Steel Company is now making more pig iron than ever before in its history. Out of its fifty-nine furnaces, fifty-seven are in blast. The only modern furnace out of these which has been out of blast since Oct. 1 was blown in last week, placing in blast every stack in the Pittsburg district, sixty-two in all.

Prices in finished steel products are firmly fixed at the new advances announced by corporation and independents last month. No further price advances are expected before the first of the year, except in sheets and tin plate, which may be given an additional push upward, and wire products, a part of which have had no advance from the low point of last Spring. On steel plates, however, the Steel Corporation is quoting $1.55 Pittsburg for first quarter 1910, and $1.60 for second quarter, as against the present quotation of $1.45. Bar iron sold last week at 1.60c., Pittsburg mill, but some makers are asking 1.65c., even on prompt shipments. Both Bessemer and open-hearth billets are commanding premiums, while the Steel Corporation thus far has refused to open its books for sheet here further ahead than April 1, and is asking one point premium on all business taken for delivery after Jan. 1. Some cut nail manufacturers announced an advance during the week from $1.65 to $1.75, but the action was not unanimous.

HOW STEEL TRADE SUFFERED.

Year of Depression Shown—Open Hearth Production Passes Bessemer.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.—An epoch in steel manufacture was marked last year, when for the first time in the history of steel making in the United States the production of open hearth steel passed that of Bessemer steel. The tonnage of both, however, was much lower than in the previous year.

The United States Geological Survey makes this comment in its report on the production of iron ores, pig iron, and steel in 1908, just issued. The year also marked a great depression in the iron industry, running from the Autumn of 1907 to the middle of 1908, but since then steadily and slowly recovering.

Iron ore production dropped below that of the preceding three years, the total quantity produced being 35,983,336 long tons, as compared with 51,720,619 long tons in 1907. The pig iron output, the lowest since 1901, was 15,936,018, as compared with 25,781,361, in 1907, and steel output, 14,023,247 long tons, as compared with 23,362,594 tons in 1907.

The demand for iron and steel products, the report points out, was reduced over 50 per cent., as compared with previous years, but the prices did not show such a marked decline as might have been expected, due to an agreement among iron makers to desist from destructive competition.

BOSTON COPPER GOSSIP.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Oct. 17.—The purchase by Calumet and Arizona of the control of Shattuck-Arizona is understood to have been effected at a cost of $6,247,500.

Utah Copper's September output is believed to have equaled that of August, which was 5,162,000 pounds. Costs were about the same.

The management of United Verde extension believes that a thick body of ore is within reach, judging from the stringers cut at 800 feet.

Nevada Consolidated is now producing at the rate of 50,000,000 to 60,000,000 pounds per annum, and with the new furnaces in operation this total will reach probably 75,000,000 pounds.

The production of Old Dominion is 90,000 pounds daily, of which one-tenth is from custom ore. The Superintendent says there is now a four-year ore reserve.

Ore values and extent of ore bodies are said to be increasing in Superior and Boston.

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

Automobile Goggles Are Taxed 50 Per Cent.—Other Tariff Decisions.

The Motor Car Equipment Company and Wakem & McLaughlin have been unsuccessful in an effort to persuade the Board of United States General Appraisers to reduce the duty on automobile goggles. The goggles were classified by Collector Loeb as being dutiable at 50 per cent. under the provision in the Dingley law for "goggles."

The importers insisted that the provision in the tariff for "goggles" is not intended to cover automobile goggles, and that the articles should be allowed to enter at 45 per cent. as "manufactures of glass," or at other rates lower than 50 per cent. General Appraiser Sharretts, who writes the decision for the board, holds that the assessment as made by the Government is correct and must stand.

Several decisions dealing with importations of jewelry and precious stones have been handed down. Protests filed by Abraham & Straus, Albert Lorsch & Co., J. V. A. Cattus, and F. W. Gertzen & Co., are overruled. The following claims are either sustained, or sustained in part: The American Express Company, L. Heller & Son, Charles Koehler, R. F. Lang, and the H. H. Tamman Curio Company.

Supremacy in Financial Advertising

In the first nine months of 1909 the New York newspapers published financial advertising as follows:

	AGATE LINES
The New York Times	557,204
Second Newspaper	494,803
Third "	461,741
Fourth "	295,895
Fifth "	240,716
Sixth "	206,808
Seventh "	205,241
Eighth "	152,944

The New York Times gained more than 50,000 lines of financial advertising over a similar period last year, notwithstanding its rejection of every questionable or objectionable announcement.

The Times printed more financial advertising in the first nine months of 1909 than the next New York morning newspaper printed in the entire year 1908.

The Times has the largest circulation among bankers, investors, and business men generally of any newspaper in America.

DUMMIES CLOUD MANY REALTY TITLES

District Attorney's Office Finds That Sham Transactions Have Gone on 30 Years.

MANY INVOLVED IN THEM

Belief That It May Be Impossible in Some Cases to Straighten Out Titles.

According to Assistant District Attorney Du Vivier the titles to between $200,000 and $300,000 worth of real estate in Manhattan have been seriously clouded by the alleged fraudulent realty transactions long covered up through the use of dummy grantees, which led on Saturday to the imprisonment in the Tombs of Irving W. Rosenthal of 103 West 129th Street on an indictment for forgery. Du Vivier considers $20,000 a low figure for the average value of the various properties dealth with in this way which he has so far examined, and he says there are from ten to fifteen such holdings.

The titles have been thrown into question by the fact that if the allegations against Mr. Rosenthal be true the foreclosures of mortgages on them were never carried out according to law, for the properties were not transferred legally.

It was the deeding of the property to a dummy grantee, according to the evidence presented to the Grand Jury, on which the whole transaction depended. Before a mortgage can be foreclosed the owner of the property must be served with a summons and complaint. Until that is done the property cannot be taken over by the holder of the mortgage.

According to Mr. Du Vivier, this form of real estate transaction has been carried on for thirty years in this city with immunity from punishment. The Assistant District Attorney says he knows of several dummies. He also has in mind other principals, and it is likely that arrests will be made.

The people who made it their business to take advantage of foreclosures in this way watched the real estate market closely. They even had runners to look out for them. When they learned of a likely-looking one they would go to the man that had deed to the property and offer him a bonus for the property, the responsibility of the mortgage naturally going with it.

The owner of the property, since he had to give it up anyway to answer the mortgage, was ready enough to close such a deal. He would make over a deed, which already contained the name of a person who was simply said to live in the Borough of Manhattan, take his bonus, and step out.

In half a dozen of the cases connected with Rosenthal, Mr. Du Vivier has in his hands papers showing that the grantee of the property was one Mrs. Margaret Graham. She is unsuspected of complicity in a fraud. Mr. Du Vivier says that simply to oblige she put her name on blank deeds that were brought to her by a son of one of Rosenthal's colleagues. But she vows that in no instance did she ever acknowledge her signature after the deed was filled out by the grantor.

It was through Mrs. Graham's testimony on this point that Rosenthal was indicted for forgery.

After this property was deeded over, the foreclosure would fall due. The lawyer representing the mortgagee would then begin a search for the holder of the property. Since this person had no address given and was more or less obscure, he could not be found. Then a fee would be exacted for information about him.

FORCED LOT SALE AT BAYSIDE BEYOND FLUSHING.

Owing to the press of circumstances I have to sell my few remaining BAYSIDE lots at far below their value. BAYSIDE is improving every minute; its railway service will soon be perfect, but some one else must make the big profits, I cannot wait. North of Broadway is the beautiful McKnight estate, with its large and handsome residences. South of Broadway, across the street, are my lots, and these MUST BE SOLD. Free fare trains will run from Long Island City to Bayside Saturday at 1:30 P. M. and Sunday at 10:20 A. M., Oct. 23 and 24, and carriages will meet you at the Bayside station. My PRICES will be RUINOUSLY LOW—as low as $150 for some lots—and terms very easy. If you want lots for a BIG RISE and SURE PROFIT, be sure and come and bring your friends. I have arranged to have your money paid to the Title Guarantee and Trust Company, who will indorse all contracts, making you absolutely safe as to deed and title. For plans and prices address

EXILED, THEY SAY, BY MRS. STETSON

Many of Her Former Students Complain That She Ostracised Them.

DIDN'T LIKE HER TEACHING

They Also Assert That She Proclaimed the First Church the Only True One in This City.

Mrs. Augusta E. Stetson, the deposed leader of the First Church of Christ, Scientist, was not in her accustomed pew yesterday at the regular morning and evening service. It was the first time for many years she had missed a morning service in the church. In her place was Mrs. Stella Stimpson, younger sister of Mrs. Stetson, who has been mentioned as a possible successor to the one-time teacher of First Church.

The eyes of every member of the congregation sought out the Stetson pew, for a rumor had gone around that the central figure in the situation might stay away from the sanctuary, in view of the last rebuke from the Mother Church which was published in the Christian Science Sentinel on Saturday.

Usually Mrs. Stetson, dressed in white, was a conspicuous figure at the services, and her absence gave rise to many rumors concerning the course she will probably pursue, since her license to teach and practice was revoked by the Mother Church directors in Boston.

Several dozen of her followers called at Mrs. Stetson's home adjoining the church just after the service, but to them she gave no inkling of what stand she intended taking in the matter. Among her callers were members of the Board of Trustees, who are standing by the deposed leader and are holding daily meetings for the purpose of gathering information concerning the acts complained of by the Mother Church.

These trustees were at the service, but none would comment on the absence of Mrs. Stetson. They said it was her affair. Reporters who sought some statement were informed that she had nothing to give out for publication at this time.

No Reference to the Trouble.

No reference to the deposition of Mrs. Stetson and her eighteen practitioners was made at the service. Virgil O. Strickler, the First Reader, and Miss Ella Young, the Second Reader, conducted the service. Miss Pinney, the organist, was in her accustomed place. In fact, the only accustomed figure lacking in the church was Mrs. Stetson herself. Members of the congregation said afterward that if any reference is to be made to the First Church situation during a service it would naturally be at the Wednesday night experience meeting, and not at a regular Sunday service.

Those who have access to the inner circle at the First Church say that Mrs. Stetson has told her followers during the last two days that Mrs. Eddy's letter, published in the last issue of The Sentinel, was quite in keeping with the attitude Mrs. Stetson had supposed all along that Mrs. Eddy had taken. She told her followers that Mrs. Eddy has disclaimed all participation in the matter of ousting Mrs. Stetson, and she points to Mrs. Eddy's letter as evidence of her assertion. Others in the church do not take that view. They say that the letter by Mrs. Eddy explicitly states that she indorses any action the Directors have taken.

It was learned that Mrs. Stetson has requested her followers not to read the newspaper accounts of the conditions in the First Church and that hundreds of the congregation are not as yet fully aware of the existing conditions. Her strength in the congregation was not impaired by the published letters, bearing on the situation, in Saturday's Sentinel, it was said.

Further information concerning the manner in which Mrs. Stetson is said to have conducted affairs in First Church prior to the action of the Mother Church Directors came out yesterday. According to a former student, who has recently deserted from the ranks of Mrs. Stetson's adherents, she sought to spread the idea among her students that the First Church was the only true Christian Science church in this city; that the several other churches lacked much in the way of living up to the doctrines of the religion.

Ostracised by Mrs. Stetson.

Those of her students who showed a preference for other practitioners in the First Church or in other congregations here complained of being ostracised by Mrs. Stetson and her intimates. There have been many such desertions in the last year or two, it is said.

Mrs. Kassan Babcock is among those who chose to ally herself with that faction in the church which opposed Mrs. Stetson's teachings. Mrs. Babcock was once a student of Mrs. Stetson, and for a while followed her guidance. Even the practitioners began to grow fearful of the results of Mrs. Stetson's methods, according to some of her former students.

Prior to the new by-law of the Mother Church which prohibited any practitioner having an office in the church or adjoining the reading rooms, Mrs. Stetson allowed many of her practitioners to practice in the church. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Charters, both of whom were practitioners in the First Church, left the building more than a year ago, and last Winter four more practitioners got out. They were Mrs. Martha Dickinson, Mrs. Mary Newall, George Otis, and Charles Strobel.

The withdrawal of these practitioners from the church building was about the time Mrs. Stetson began planning for another building to hold the overflow from First Church. An option was obtained on property at 100th Street and Riverside Drive, which was to cost about $2,000,000. A meeting was called and $100,000 was subscribed for the project. But when this came to the ears of the Mother Church Directors an editorial announcement appeared in The Christian Science Sentinel saying that any plan to rival the Mother Church was not in accord with the true conception of Christian Science.

This was a great blow to Mrs. Stetson, it is said. She had intended to control the two churches and had hopes of building up a joint congregation which would exceed 4,000 in membership.

Those who once had access to the practitioner's rooms in the First Church say that in each of them was a photograph of Mrs. Stetson. Her photographs were also on sale at the desk of the reading room, as well as copies of her book of poems. There was a large sale of each, for the congregation of First Church numbers nearly 2,000.

In addition to the practitioners who had offices in the church building, Mrs. Stetson has for several years allowed several practitioners to live in her home at 7 West Ninety-sixth Street. Among them are Miss Sybil Huse, Miss Antoinette Ensworth, Miss Mary Pinney, and Mrs. Augusta Aikman. Miss Pinney is the organist in First Church. With the exception of Miss Pinney all the practitioners who lived in the Stetson household were admonished not to practice by the Mother Church recently.

It is said that Mrs. Stetson has proscribed the eating of meat in her household. Mrs. Stimpson is the one exception to this rule. Mrs. Stetson has often told her students that the eating of meat represented "animality," and that the more spiritual one is the less he cares for "gustatory pleasures." Tea and coffee are also forbidden by Mrs. Stetson, according to one close to the household.

Among the several hundred men and women who have sought advice from Mrs. Stetson during the last few years, and who have at various times followed her guidance, are many playwrights who have achieved reputations here and elsewhere. Charles Klein, author of "The Lion and the Mouse," "The Music Master," and "The Third Degree," is said to have been one of Mrs. Stetson's favorite students. Miss Phelps and Miss Short, who wrote "The Grand Army Man," were also members of her class, as also was David Bispham, it is said. Thomas Nast, son of the famous cartoonist, is another who has studied under Mrs. Stetson.

BRUMMER ESCAPES AGAIN.

Army Prisoner Again Quits Fort Hamilton, This Time with Another.

John Brummer of the Second Cavalry, a military prisoner at Fort Hamilton, who escaped last August and walked most of the way to Wallingford, Conn., to see his dying father, has again escaped from the fort. This time he was accompanied by Charles A. Cornell of the Fifteenth Cavalry, another military prisoner.

A general police alarm has been sent out, and a detachment of soldiers from Fort Hamilton searched all day yesterday for the refugees. Late in the day an open manhole leading into the trunk line sewer which runs from Bath Beach to New York Bay was discovered by the searchers, and it is believed that Brummer and Cornell used the sewer in their escape. There was only a few inches of water in the sewer, and they could easily have walked along its entire length.

The men escaped from the fort late Saturday afternoon, but the police were not notified until yesterday. Brummer and Cornell were raking leaves near the parade ground, while a sentry of the Ninety-eighth Company of Coast Artillery stood guard. The sentry turned his back for a moment, and when he looked again for his men they had disappeared.

Several shots were fired to attract the attention of the garrison. Major Herman Schumm, the Commandant, was notified, and ordered Lieut. Boatright and twenty soldiers with rifles to search. Footprints in the damp ground indicated that the prisoners had run toward Dyker Heights Meadows. The searching party scoured the meadows until long after dark, but no trace of the men could be found. The footprints were lost at the edge of the meadow lands.

Lanterns were used by the searchers until 10 o'clock at night, when they gave up the quest. An hour later word reached the fort that two men resembling Brummer and Cornell had been seen boarding an Eighty-sixth Street car at Fifth Avenue and Eighty-sixth Street, Fort Hamilton, and that they at that time wore black derby hats and checked suits. When they escaped both prisoners had on the regulation military prisoner suits, brown in color, with the letter "P," for "prisoner," worked on the left sleeve and at the trouser knee.

The Fort Hamilton authorities believe that the men may have been aided to escape by friends on the outside.

GIVES A SUFFRAGE LUNCHEON.

Mrs. Walston H. Brown's Guests Addressed by Dr. Shaw and Prof. Potter.

An informal meeting was held yesterday afternoon under the auspices of the National Woman Suffrage Association at the Summer home of Walston H. Brown, near Dobbs Ferry. Invitations had been sent to 150 of the Summer residents at Tarrytown, Ardsley, and Greystone, who mostly came in their automobiles, while a few of the guests traveled by water in their power boats.

Mrs. Brown is a daughter of the late Col. Robert Ingersoll.

The speakers for the meeting, which began at 3 o'clock, were Dr. Anna Shaw and Prof. Frances Squire Potter. Miss Mary McArthur, President of the Women's Trade Unions of Great Britain, had been invited to address the meeting, but she was taken ill on the train yesterday morning on her way from Chicago to New York, and was unable to be present.

In her speech Dr. Anna Shaw pointed out that the wheels of government should go as smoothly as those of the great machines in the power houses, which revolve so fast that to the onlooker it seems as if the wheels stood still. This would not come, she said, until the whole of the people had a voice in the government.

Luncheon was served before the meeting, to which twenty-five guests were invited, among them Miss Julia Marlowe, the actress. She said that she was too tired to speak then, but in November she hoped to deliver an address in behalf of woman suffrage, of which she is an advocate.

Among those who attended the meeting were Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Untermyer, Oswald Villard, Herbert Carpenter, Courtenay Smith, and others.

WALSTEIN ROOT DEAD.

War Correspondent and Nephew of Senator Elihu Root.

Walstein Root, a well-known newspaper man and war correspondent, nephew of United States Senator Elihu Root, and brother of Oren Root, General manager of the Metropolitan Street Railway Company, died yesterday afternoon in a Chicago hospital from heart trouble complicated by tuberculosis. He was 37 years old.

He was graduated from Hamilton in the class of 1890. A short time after that he entered newspaper work on The New York Sun.

When the Spanish war came, he went to Cuba as correspondent for The Sun. After the war, in the period of reconstruction, he remained correspondent in Cuba for about two years. Then returning to this city he worked on the staff of The Sun till 1901, when his health became poor, and for the sake of day work he went to The Evening World.

A few months later he found he had tuberculosis. For his health he went first to Colorado, then to Pasadena, Cal., making occasional excursions to the Rocky Mountains.

LITTLE GIRL SET AFIRE.

Boy Touched Dress with a Firebrand "to See How She Looked."

Just to see how she "would look," a boy of her own age set fire to the clothing of five-year-old Fannie Levine of 1848 Park Place, Brooklyn, last night, and before her mother and Policeman Michael Galvin could save her, the girl was dying. Her mother was slightly burned in tearing off the child's dress.

With the other children, Fannie and the Galvin boy played around a bonfire in a lot next door to the Levine home. Hands joined, they danced around the blaze. Fannie tripped and fell.

"You almost pushed me into the fire," she said to the boy.

"Let me se how you'd look burning up," he said, and, snatching up a blazing piece of wood, he ignited her dress. With the other children, he ran away, leaving the child screaming with pain and fright. Policeman Galivin and Mrs. Levine rushed to tte child, but Dr. Reilly, who took her to St. aMry's Hospital, said she would die.

EIGHT IN A CATBOAT ADRIFT ALL NIGHT

Three Men and Five Women, Tossed in the Sound, Nearly Perish from Cold.

THE YALE TAKES OFF THREE

Young Woman Refuses to Abandon the Boat—Clergyman Not In Time for His Sermon.

After being adrift in Long Island Sound in an auxiliary catboat, the engine of which was disabled, huddled in the bitter cold of a small cabin, their little craft almost engulfed in the heavy seas, a party of three men and five women were rescued yesterday morning and landed here.

Three were taken off in the early morning by the Metropolitan Line steamer Yale, bound from Boston to this port. The others, including three young women, elected to stay by the craft. Later in the day they were taken off by a passing tug just a few minutes before their boat capsized.

The party left New Rochelle for Glen Cove, seven miles across the Sound, early Saturday afternoon. It was made up of the Rev. Raymond J. Davies, pastor of the Williamsbridge Baptist Church of 3,718 Willett Avenue; Mr. and Mrs. Fred H. Parsons of 3,335 Olinville Avenue, and Martha, Ethel, and Mabel Dobbs, sisters, and Mary Dobbs, their cousin, all of 818 East 217th Street, Williamsbridge, and Richard McKenzie of 617 East 124th Street.

The party was made up by the Misses Dobbs, and it had been their intention to take a boat belonging to their uncle, but that craft having been disabled they took the auxiliary boat belonging to J. H. Dobbs, their brother, without his permission.

The trip across the Sound was made without accident, and they started on the return about 6 P. M., expecting to be home by 9 o'clock. They were about half way across the Sound when the engine broke down, and the boat fell off into a fair sea.

The men at once set about raising sail McKenzie and Parsons are both engineers, but they knew nothing about sailing a boat They could do nothing with the sail, as there was a brisk wind blowing, and they soon found that the sails might cause the boat to capsize. They attempted to anchor, but the anchor would not hold.

Then, realizing their helplessness, they huddled together in the small cabin to wait for daylight and rescue. Their side lights were burning and the men took turns in watching for a passing craft. To add to their troubles the Sound grew still more rough, and the small boat without headway was buffeted about, and the water at times broke over her. All became seasick.

The clergyman was greatly disturbed because he could not get home in time for his sermon.

All through the night the boat drifted, and at eight o'clock yesterday morning she was about three miles east of Captain's Island and in the middle of the Sound. Parsons, who was on watch, discovered the Yale coming down on her way to New York. One of the men hoisted the flag upside down as a distress signal, while McKenzie whistled for help.

Capt. Thompson of the Yale saw their signal and stopped his vessel. Within ten minutes a boat in charge of the first mate was alongside the drifting catboat. He was greeted by a shivering party. An offer was made to take them all off, but Miss Martha Dobbs, the oldest of the sisters, refused to abandon her brother's boat.

"You may all go if you want to, but I'm going to stay and look after this boat," she said.

Mr. Davies, Mrs. Parsons, and Miss Ethel Dobbs decided to go aboard the Yale. The others agreed to stand by the plucky Miss Dobbs. The three were taken on board the Yale and she started on her way again. A wireless message was sent to relatives of the rescued persons, telling them what had happened. The operator also notified the Stamford police and the agent of the Metropolitan Line here.

The Stamford police sent a boat out, but could not locate the drifting catboat. They then notified the harbor police here and the Patrol went out. She was intercepted and turned back by the revenue cutter Mohawk, which started out after the missing party.

After the rescue of part of the party by the Yale the boat drifted nearly ten miles before she was noted by a passing tugboat. The latter was soon alongside, and agreed to tow the disabled craft in. As soon as the little boat was taken in tow her bow dug into the seas, and water began to pour over her deck. The five huddled in the small cabin could not see out for the constant breaking of the waves over her. The tug was at the end of the line some 100 feet ahead, and her skipper apparently not aware that the small boat was in danger of being swamped. McKenzie again whistled danger blasts to the tug, which slowed down, and as the catboat came alongside, the adventurous five were taken off. A few seconds afterward the catboat capsized. She was kept afloat, however, by the air in her cabin, and in this way she was towed into New Rochelle. It was almost dark when the rescued party got home.

SMALL INSURANCE SHORTAGE.

Equitable Controller Says Doran's Thefts Won't Exceed $2,000.

Gerald R. Brown, Controller of the Equitable Life Assurance Society, who has had charge of the investigation of the thefts of the clerk, James R. Doran, who was arrested on Saturday charged with forgery, said yesterday that the company would not lose any money.

"Doran was bonded," said the Controller, "and we are also covered by the contract with the agents, which states that any commission paid twice by the Equitable Life Assurance Society to them must be refunded. I think that the shortage will not exceed $2,000. It could not have been going on for more than four months, as we prove our accounts every month, and have them audited by a firm of expert accountants every three months."

Mr. Brown went on to say that Doran, who was accused of erasing dates in the cashier's books against policies, so that agents who shared the spoil with him received their commissions twice, had been a steady man and he had never suspected him, but Clarence U. Webster, the chief cashier, had. After the evidence of the stealing was got together, Doran was sent for and confessed his guilt, and the case was then placed in the hands of the District Attorney.

The man had been in the employ of the Equitable for five years and received a salary of $125 a month. He lives with his wife at 337 West Fourteenth Street.

BOWERY GREETS HOBO KING.

James Eads How, Millionaire Tramp, Came from Canada in Immigrant Train

James Eads How, the "millionaire hobo," organizer of the "Welfare Brotherhood," was welcomed back to the Bowery yesterday afternoon. How, who is also sometimes referred to by his followers as the "king of the hoboes," got back to New York yesterday morning after a long absence in Europe, where he says he investigated the condition of the unemployed on the Continent and in England.

Dressed as a tramp How, who is said to be worth upward of $1,000,000, appeared at 33 Bowery, the meeting place for the unemployed of that part of the city, about 2:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon. He wore an old sack suit that looked none too warm for the day, his low tan shoes were cracked with age and in need of repairing, and his shirt was in keeping with the other garments. He wore no overcoat, and proudly informed his audience, whom he addressed as "brothers," that he had arrived in New York from Montreal on an immigrant's ticket only a few hours before.

The audience that packed the dark, poorly ventilated room at 33 Bowery yesterday afternoon was made up of as miserable a lot of outcasts as could be got together. Every type of Bowery derelict was represented, from the gray-bearded wreck of years of dissipation to the young fellow who had settled down to spend his life in the bread lines and cheap lodging houses.

Alexander Law, Secretary of the Welfare Brotherhood, whose good clothes and clean white linen, made him a conspicuous figure in the room, was in charge of the welcoming meeting. Cornelius Donovan, equally well dressed, who is the candidate of the "Rent Payers and the Unemployed" for Mayor, made the introductory speech.

After Mr. Donovan, "Brother James" spoke, for in the Welfare League every man, be he hobo or officer, is a brother. How, the son of a famous Western railroad official, grandson of the great engineer who built the Eads Bridge over the Mississippi, and a graduate of Harvard, greeted his friends—he seemed to know everybody present—with expressions of affection.

He began by telling of his visit to Paris, where he talked with the unemployed "brethren" over there. He also told about England, and said the army of the unemployed in London totals 100,000, while in Liverpool there are 50,000. In all England there were 1,000,000 people, he added, styled paupers. He intimated that some of the English unemployed wanted to come to this country.

"I told them," How said, "that when I left America things over here were on the 'bum,' and not to come yet. When things improve I told them we'd let them know."

How closed with a tribute to Prof. Ferrer, the Spanish revolutionist, who was executed a few days ago. He asked the unemployed of New York to adopt resolutions of sympathy for Ferrer's daughters, who are in Paris. Not many of those present appeared to know who Ferrer was. The resolutions were adopted at a business meeting that followed the public welcoming ceremonies.

As each "brother" entered the hall he received a pamphlet containing songs that are to be sung, so it was said, at the next National Convention of the Unemployed. The pamphlet was signed by James Eads How as Chairman. One of the songs was called "My Country" and began: "My country, what of thee? What hast thou done for me?"

"The Bread Line" was the title of another song. Here is a verse from it:

> Thieves and thugs from the rookeries,
> Beggars and vags from the slums,
> The honest poor from the tenements,
> Workers and boys and bums,
> All are mingled together,
> Shivering in nameless dread,
> Trembling and chattering and stumbling,
> In search of a piece of bread.
> (Chorus.)
> The bre[illegible] line, the dead line,
> The [illegible] deepest want.
> The b[illegible]e, the dead line,
> Hung[illegible] ragged and gaunt.

After the meeting it was said that How assisted many of those who were in need of food.

WELL DIGGER'S BODY FOUND.

Rescuers Come Upon Cussens After Two Weeks of Hard Work.

SAYVILLE, L. I., Oct. 17.—Seventy feet below the surface, Edward Gildersleeve, the well digger in charge of the rescue work, came upon the body of John Cussens to-day, who was buried two weeks ago this morning in a well on his father's farm north of Central Islip. The well was ninety feet deep, and it was thought the rescuers would have to go to its full depth before they found the body.

John R. Van Wormer Better.

The condition of John R. Van Wormer, Vice President of the Lincoln Safe Deposit and Warehouse Company, who was stricken with paralysis several days ago, was slightly improved yesterday, and his physicians said that they anticipated no sudden change for the worse. Mr. Van Wormer was able to take nourishment.

Benjamin Adams, for five years assistant to the chief of the circulation department of the New York Public Library, was elected chief of the department by the trustees on Wednesday to succeed Dr. A. E. Bostwick.

The eighth annual meeting of the New York State Nurses' Association will be held to-morrow and Wednesday in the Assembly Hall of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Building, 18 East Twenty-fourth Street. The first session will begin at 10 A. M. Among the speakers will be Mrs. Florence Kelly, Miss De Witt, Dr. Allen, Miss Delano, and Miss Ward.

Archbishop Farley presided at the laying of the cornerstone yesterday afternoon of the new school of the Church of the Incarnation, 173d Street and St. Nicholas Avenue. The school will have seats for 1,000 children.

Miss Henrietta Nordheim, 40 years old, committed suicide by inhaling illuminating gas at the home of her brother, George Nordheim, at 1,412 Prospect Avenue, on Saturday night. She had been partly helpless through paralysis of the right arm and left leg since birth, and her relatives say, believed herself a burden to them.

WOMAN SHOT DEAD; POLICE HOLD FRIEND

Philip Italiano Angered by the Color of a Shirt Bought by Santina Dato.

MURDER, SAYS THE CORONER

Guests Asked to Take Breakfast with the Couple Arrive Soon After the Tragedy.

Philip Italiano, a bookkeeper and stenographer, quarreled with his friend Santina Dato, with whom he had been living for three years in a four-room flat on the third floor of a tenement at 276 First Avenue, yesterday morning, over the color of a shirt which Italiano had ordered the woman to buy for him on Saturday night. In the disagreement the woman was shot through the heart. Despite his protests that she had committed suicide, Italiano was arrested charged with homicide.

Italiano's wife, Annie De Nicola, who had been married to him nine years ago in Italy, has been living, since her husband deserted her, with her sister at 437 East Thirteenth Street. Their daughter, Iola, 8 years of age, lived with her father, as did Italiano's grown-up sister, Jennie. Italiano made good wages with the firm of V. Savarese, 40 Irving Place, Brooklyn.

He had invited several friends to a Sunday morning breakfast, and to prepare for the occasion he ordered the Dato woman to buy him a shirt. It did not suit his fancy when he saw it yesterday morning, and, according to the bookkeeper's sister, he lost his temper. There was a quarrel and then a shot. Jennie Italiano rushed to the street and found Detective Frank Rooney of the East Twenty-second Street Station. He went to the flat and found Italiano holding the Dato woman in his arms. She was conscious, and when the policeman asked her who had shot her she refused to make a statement.

Dr. Rogers of Bellevue Hospital was called, and when he arrived the woman was dead. When Rooney looked around for the little girl, Iola, she had disappeared. He took Italiano and his sister to the East Twenty-second Street Station, the former protesting all the way that the Dato woman had shot herself. The sister told Rooney of the quarrel over the shirt, but Italiano wouldn't admit it.

Coroner Harburger was sent for, and while he was making an investigation of the flat Italiano's friends, who had been invited to breakfast, arrived. They were much disturbed over the tragedy and quickly disappeared. The Coroner found evidences of a struggle in the bedroom. Clothing was scattered about and a curtain was torn. The girl Iola and Italiano's sister were detained as material witnesses. Italiano will be arraigned in the Yorkville Court this morning.

SEARCH FOR MURDER CLUE.

Fall River Mill Workers Try in Vain to Find Missing Head of Girl.

Special to The New York Times.

TIVERTON, R. I., Oct. 17.—Another possible clue to the murderer of the young woman, parts of whose body were discovered in the woods near here last Monday, was found to-day when a small pine box was picked up on the farm of Christopher Hicks on Fish Road. The inside of the box was bloodstained.

Mr. Hicks told the police he saw the box there several days ago, but paid no attention to it. The belief is strong in Tiverton that the missing head of the murdered woman was in the box.

The box was turned over to the Tiverton police by Deputy Sheriff Frank P. King of Newport, who had been at work on the case during the day and who found a white cotton handkerchief with the initial "T" on Fish Road, near where a portion of the dismembered body was found last week. Wilfrid Thibeault is one of the men the Fall River police are holding in connection with the murder.

The handkerchief was saturated with blood, and it is believed had been used to wipe the saw which was used to dismember the body.

The Tiverton countryside was the objective point to-day of an influx of hundreds of mill operatives from Fall River, who searched for the missing head of the murdered girl. But their hunt was without result. The police fear now that the head—the one means of positive identification of the mutilated body—lies at the bottom of Mount Hope Bay.

The identification of the clothes found several days ago several miles from the body, was the principal factor in the original supposition that the body was Miss St. Jean's. It is still possible that the body is that of another person. The finding of the head is necessary to give the police a firm basis for their case.

Meanwhile "Prof." Frank Hill and Wilfrid Thibeault spent their Sunday in cells at Fall River Police Headquarters, and will remain there at least until the question of their connection with the murder is heard in court on Oct. 25, one week from to-morrow.

RUNAWAY IN A PARK THRONG.

Two Men Bowled Over and the Driver Slightly Hurt.

Taking the bit in his teeth, a horse attached to a baker's wagon bolted into crowded Seward Park yesterday, scattering men, women, and children in all directions. He crashed into an electric light pole, and then into an iron bench, throwing out his driver.

In his dash of a hundred yards he ran over Philip Levine of 226 Henry Street and Morris Varkin of 48 Rutgers Street. Both were taken to Gouverneur Hospital, Levine with a crushed foot and Varkin with contusions of the body.

The driver, Isaac Vogel of 194 East Third Street, was also slightly hurt. He was arested and taken to the Essex Market Court on a technical charge of assault, but was discharged.
